MRS. HOWARD GOULD IN BATTLE OF WITS BAFFLES LAWYER

NEW YORK, June 11.—Mrs. Viola Catherine Clemmons Gould again took the stand to-day in Justice Victor J. Dowling's part of the Supreme Court at the trial of her separation suit against Howard Gould.

Mrs. Gould came into court with her lawyer, Clarence J. Shearn, and J. S. Sturtevant of his office. Delancy Nicoll, Mr. Gould's lawyer, immediately resumed the cross-examination in attempting to show that Mrs. Gould had been extravagant. She made sharp retorts to many questions and avoided cunningly all efforts to trap her.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Mrs. Viola Katherine Clemmons Gould again took the stand to-day in Justice Victor J. Dowling's part of the Supreme Court at the trial of her separation suit against Howard Gould.

Q.—Mrs. Gould, how much did you pay for the Blue Gap Farm? A.—I can't say exactly.

Q.—Thirty-eight thousand dollars? A.—I hardly think it was quite that.

Mrs. Gould said the farm was taken in the name of a stock company she formed, of which Mr. Sells was president. She said she was not a member of the board of directors of the company.

Forgets Railroad Bonds.

Q.—What had you in Iron Mountain bonds? A.—I have no recollection of the number.

Q.—Didn't you yourself clip off the coupons? A.—Occasionally.

Q.—Did you take any articles from Castle Gould to the Blue Gap Farm? A.—Some.

Q.—How many boxes full? A.—I took some blankets from the stable.

Q.—So that all you took were some stable blankets? A.—I didn't say that was all, did I?

Some Linen From Paris.

Q.—I understood you so. A.—No, I also took some odds and ends besides the blankets which Mr. Molloy thought were not good enough for his servants.

Q.—Was there a carpenter named Trolen at Castle Gould? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he pack the things? A.—I really don't recall.

Q.—Take any desks? A.—I can't recall.

Q.—Pictures? A.—No.

Q.—Any beds? A.—A few.

Q.—Linen? A.—I bought some at Paris. I may have taken that to Blue Gap farm.

Q.—How many truckloads did they make? A.—It did not make any truckloads. What do you call a truckload?

Q.—Don't you know what a truckload is? A.—I know what I would call a truckload, but not what you would.

Q.—How many cattle did you take along?

BRIBE PLOT TOLD IN FRAUD CASE TRIAL

The government rested at 12:45 o'clock in the trial of the "business chance" cases, and Lawyer Thomas W. Proctor began his opening address for the defendants, who are accused of conspiracy and larceny in the sale of small business in Boston. The indictments were secured during the term of the late District Attorney Moran.

Following the surprise at yesterday's session, when one of the defendants, Melvin D. Ferguson, turned state's witness, another defendant was placed on the stand by the government to-day, the tenth day of the trial. He was Howard M. Faust.

"I was sick at heart over the whole business," he declared, explaining his decision to testify for the state.

Cardenio F. King's name was brought into the case during the cross-examination of Faust, who was asked about a "fund planned to fix the case up."

Stuart's Straw Man.

Cross-examined by Attorney Sullivan Faust said that Frank G. McKinnon, one of the defendants, had told him fully ten times that he was a straw man for Charles S. Stuart. Faust was asked by Attorney Sullivan:

"Did you become a party to an attempted bribe of police officials or the District Attorney's office to get free?"

"No," declared Faust.

Q.—Didn't you tell Stuart (a defendant) to go ahead and fix this thing up and you would give $500 towards $2,500, which Stuart said was necessary to get in order to fix this case? A.—I told Stuart I would give $500 to have this fixed.

Q.—And Stuart told you it was going to cost $2,500? A.—Yes.

Q.—So you knew that this $2,500 was going to be got together to bribe somebody that this prosecution might be stopped; to bribe some police officials and the District Attorney, didn't you? A.—Well, I didn't know just what was going to be done, but I was willing to spend $500 or even $5,000 if this prosecution could be stopped.

Told to "Go Ahead."

Q.—Having committed one crime, and being afraid of its penalty, you were ready then to commit a greater one; to conspire in order that prosecuting officers should be bribed? A.—No, I will not say that. I didn't know how this money was to be raised.

Q.—Do you remember telling Stuart to go ahead and fixe this thing up anyway? A.—Yes, I told Stuart that.

Q.—Did you hear the name of Cardenio F. King mentioned in connection with this transaction, this attempt at bribery? A.—Well, yes; King's name was mentioned.

Q.—What was the reference to King? A.—Stuart said that Lawyer McDonough (of counsel for the defence) had helped the district attorney to put King away and that the prosecuting officials were under obligations to him.

Q.—That was all, as you recall it? A.—Yes.

WOMEN WILL VOTE, SAYS MRS. BELMONT

NEW YORK, June 11.—Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont returned from Europe to-day on the Cunard liner Mauretania a militant suffragette. She was accompanied by Mrs. Ida Husted Harper. Both were delegates to the convention of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance at London.

"I could poke a hole in a picture of Premier Asquith with delight," said Mrs. Belmont. "The English suffragettes are maligned. They are the victims of hostile politicians and press. Really they are dignified women, and if men did the things in a campaign that they have done there would be no arrests. They will win the ballot long before women get it in the United States. We have been waiting forty years, but now we are prepared to carry the fight into politics. And we will fight till we get what we want."

TARBOX FLEES IRATE FATHER OF HIS 'BRIDE'

Bernard L. Tarbox, the young Boston coal merchant, who deserted his young bride and eloped and married his stenographer, Gertrude Mae Devine, a nineteen-year-old girl of Dorchester, it was learned definitely to-day, has fled from Buffalo to Canada to escape the wrath of the girl's father, who is in hot pursuit of the couple.

"I am determined to get my girl back," declared Mr. Devine to a friend before he took up the chase. "I propose to find her if I have to chase them all over the country, and when I find them—well, my daughter will return with me."

Hurry Trip to Buffalo.

Disappearing from Rochester, N. Y., when they learned that Mr. Devine was in search of them, Tarbox and his girl companion scurried by train to Buffalo.

Mr. Devine reached Niagara Falls, Ont., to-day in his search for his daughter. He appealed to Chief of Police John Kimmins to help him. He said that he knew that the authorities of Canada had no power to interfere, even if he had a warrant for the arrest of Tarbox, but he merely wanted to find the girl and try and induce her to return home. With the assistance of a policeman all of the hotels on the Canadian side of the Falls were searched, but no trace of the elusive couple was found.

There they stopped at Hotel Broezel, and their location in that city was not learned until after they had left to-day, apparently to skip across the border into Canada, where Tarbox may not be reached with a warrant for bigamy.

It became known to-day that Tarbox made careful preparations for his flight and that a man in this city holds $5,000 in cash that belongs to the young man and which it is expected will be called for at any time.

Over the long-distance telephone it was learned to-day that Tarbox and Miss Devine had been at Hotel Broezel, and that they had left. This conversation with the hotel was held by a reporter of this newspaper:

Headed for Canada.

Reporter—Is B. L. Tarbox registered there?

Clerk—He left yesterday at 4 o'clock.

Reporter—Was he accompanied by a woman?

Clerk—Yes. They were registered as man and wife.

Reporter—Did Tarbox drop any hint as to where he was going?

Clerk—None. He paid his bill, and then he and the woman walked from the hotel in the direction of the station. They had no auto. It looked as though they were going to Canada.

Asked if Tarbox had any callers, the Broezel clerk replied that no one had been to the hotel to see him, and that no one apparently knew he was there, for there had been no effort after he left to trace him.

The clerk said Tarbox and Miss Devine appeared happy, although Tarbox was in a hurry to leave and went away without attracting attention, except from the clerk at the desk.

It is only twenty-three miles from here to Niagara Falls, and it is believed Tarbox took that route to get into Canada. There is no agreement between Canada and the United States which permits the extradition of a man on a bigamy charge.

The fear of Tarbox that he might be arrested for bigamy before he could get into Canada was evident in his hurried flights from Rochester and Buffalo. He left Rochester just in time to evade the girl's father.

HUSBAND IN SUIT TELLS OF TRYST AT GATE

Harry L. Dorr of Woodlawn avenue, Randolph, to-day filed with the clerk of the Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham a suit for $15,000 against Percy C. Crockett, a wealthy shoe manufacturer of the same town, for alleged alienation of his wife's affections. Dorr, a shoemaker by trade, is twenty-five, while his wife, Marion, is twenty. They have not been living together for a year. Crockett is forty years old.

Gifts of strawberries and apples and daily trysts at the garden gate figure in the husband's allegations. The domestic tangle dates back three years, it is said, when Crockett used to call on Mrs. Dorr with gifts of fruit from his farm. Crockett became so infatuated, the husband claims, that he would go out of his way every day to meet Mrs. Dorr, who used to wait around the gate in expectation of his visits.

Dorr has also filed a libel for divorce against his wife, naming Crockett. This libel is filed in Plymouth County. In April Dorr brought a suit for divorce in Norfolk County on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment, but the case was dismissed. Mrs. Dorr has filed a cross libel to her husband's second suit. The two libels are still pending.

FREED ON CHARGE BY HEALTH BOARD

William E. Clark of No. 20 Auburndale avenue, Auburndale, charged by Dr. George F. Curtis of the Newton Board of Health with allowing his little daughter to attend school while suffering from scarlet fever, was to-day found not guilty in the Newton Police Court. Clark declared that the child had been ailing, but he had summoned no physician, as the case didn't seem to warrant it.

SIX SHOT IN RIOT.

ERIE, Pa., June 11.—In a strike riot here one man was shot and five others were injured. Four arrests were made and the police dispersed the rioters after hard work.

WOMEN IN BATTLE FOR GOLF TITLE

SHORT HILLS, N. J., June 11.—Both sides were hopeful of winning when the women gathered to-day on the links of the Baltusrol Golf Club for the decisive inter-city match for the Griscom trophy. The opposing forces are represented by Boston and New York, and while the former looked stronger on paper, it was evident that the Massachusetts women entertained a wholesome respect for the resurrected Metropolitan combination.

Miss Julia R. Mix, the Metropolitan champion, was again placed at number one for her side, while opposed to the Englewood girl was Miss Kate C. Harley of Fall River, the national title holder. Next on the list were Miss Mary B. Adams of Wollaston, the new Eastern champion, against Miss Georgianna Bishop, who lost her Metropolitan title recently at Nassau. Then came Mrs. C. T. Stout of Richmond County and Mrs. G. W. Boop.

Others on the local team were Mrs. M. O. Patterson, Mrs. N. P. Rogers, Miss Marie Bryce, Mrs. E. A. Manice, Mrs. W. F. Morgan, Mrs. W. J. Faith, Mrs. E. F. Sanford, Mrs. C. L. Tiffany, Mrs. W. O. Vanderpool, Miss Mark K. Wetmore and Miss Page Schwarswalder. This is the same team that played against Philadelphia yesterday, save that Miss Schwarswalder takes the place of Mrs. F. M. Bacon.

The others on the Boston line-up were Miss M. W. Phelps, Mrs. F. W. Batchelder, Miss E. B. Foster, Miss Alice Underwood, Mrs. Alexander McGregor, Miss C. Shreve, Miss C. L. Duncan, Mrs. G. H. Converse, Miss C. Morrill, Miss Pauline Firth and Mrs. St. Johns Smith.

When the first pairs got away the sun was trying to come out and the prospects were ideal. There was no wind to interfere with the flight of the balls and the greens never looked better.

Mrs. Patterson beat Mrs. Batchelder four up and three to go. Mrs. Patterson had a little advantage from being on her home course, but she was putting in unusually fine form.

Miss Hurry beat Miss Phelps 3 up and 2 to go. The latter proved unexpectedly weak. Miss Hurry took 51 to go out, but made 32 on the seven holes that she played coming in. Mrs. Stout beat Mrs. Roope 2 up and 1 to go. Mrs. Stout won wholly on her long game, although Mrs. Roope is a long driver.

KISSES SON; ENDS LIFE.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Kissing her son James as he slept, Mrs. Philippina Wilkie, forty-six years old, went to the roof of her home at No. 165 East Fourth street, kneeling for a moment in prayer on the cornice, crossed her hands over her breast and jumped to the sidewalk, five stories below, dying instantly. She had been in ill health for some time.

REJECTS LABOR PLEA AGAINST HOLDING BILL

Representative Joseph A. Parks of Fall River, a Democrat, and one of the labor leaders of the House, created a sensation in the House to-day, when, besides arguing in favor of Governor Draper's holding company bill, he repudiated a telegram sent by John Golden of Fall River asking him to oppose the Draper bill.

Golden is one of the biggest labor men in the country. He refused to be considered for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor last Fall.

His telegram to Parks, read by Parks in the House to-day, is as follows:

> The textile unions are opposed to the Draper holding company bill. See our friend Washburn. His bill looks good. (Signed) JOHN GOLDEN.

"I have investigated," said Parks, "and I have been unable to find anyone who knows anything about any meeting of any textile union in my city, taking any action on the holding company bill. Someone asked John Golden to send this to me. The facts in this telegram are not borne out by labor men in Fall River with whom I have talked over the telephone to-day."

"Does the member from Fall River (Parks) mean to tell us that Mr. Golden wilfully misrepresents matters in this case?" asked Representative Grady of Ward 6.

White Replies to Parks.

Representative Parks: "I mean to say that someone asked John Golden to send this telegram to me. I'm not going to heed it. I'm in favor of the Governor's bill and against the Washburn bill."

Representative White of Brookline attacked Parks' statement and recited at length the history of the opposition of labor unions and labor men, including Mr. Golden, to anything that would help a merger of the Boston & Maine and the New Haven road.

The House adjourned at 1:15 to-day with a vote on the holding company bill not yet in sight. Teh farmers in the Legislature are fighting to have a vote deferred until Tuesday. The fate of their bill to abolish the milk standard will be decided in the Senate on that day. Their voting strength in the House, sixty or seventy, is being held over the State machine on the holding company bill to secure the passage of the milk bill.

Representative Underhill of Somerville moved when the House met to-day that the vote be taken at 12:35 to-day. Washburn of Worcester opposed, and Underhill withdrew his motion.

Blames Mellen and Tuttle.

Representative Mellen of Worcester favored the Washburn bill and charged that President Mellen of the New Haven and President Tuttle of the Boston & Maine are wholly responsible for the railroad tangle in New England to-day. Representative Parks followed Mellen. Then came the speech by White.

On the motion of Representative Bishop of Newton the House voted to meet Monday at 10:30 instead of at 1, the usual hour.

WEST SIDE PARK, Chicago, June 11.—The Boston Doves and the Chicago Cubs were all set for the first game of their series here this afternoon. Ideal weather prevailed for the game. The sun was shining brightly, the first time this week, while the sky was cloudless. There was a bit of chill in the air, but this promised to pass away.

Neither Manager Bowerman or President George Dovey is with the team, which is in charge of Harry Smith, the old-time catcher, who will have the privilege of breaking in Chick Autrey, the new first baseman. Autrey, who was secured by purchase from the Cincinnati club, joined the team yesterday.

The new man was with the Omaha team last season and is a heavy hitter. As a first baseman he has been compared favorably with Hal Chase, Jiggs Donohue and Fred Tenney, and there is little question that his advent will add considerable strength to the team.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, June 12.—No spy glasses were required by the fans to pick out Uncle Cy Young from the bunch of Cleveland players that strolled on the field this afternoon. Although the veteran wore a gray uniform for the first time on these grounds there was no mistaking the tall, broad-shouldered warrior that limbered up his mighty right arm in front of the visitors' bench.

And what a welcome the old fellow got when he stepped to the box and again when he first went to bat! No matter what uniform he wears Old Cy will always be the same Old Cy—the old pal—to the Boston baseball public.

Young was cordially greeted by his former teammates, but friendship ceased when the teams lined up for battle. Cy looked like any other pitcher to the Red Sox players and they were out to do him if they could. And it was the same with the veteran. He was out to win.

The field was somewhat soft from the recent rains. The sun and the drizzle played hide and seek. Had the day been warm and sunshiny the stands would have been packed, because the news that Young would pitch for the Naps to-day was all over town.

SOROLLA GETS HALF MILLION

Enchanted with America and with half a million dollars of good American money in his pocket, Jaquin Sorolla y Bastida, the great "sunshine" artist of Spain, is on his way back to his native country.

Of the fortune which Sorolla picked up in his short stay in this country through the sale of pictures and in commissions, $55,000 was obtained in Boston. He sailed from New York yesterday on the French liner Provence.

Before embarking Sorolla had this to say to a reporter: "My heart is full of gratitude at the extraordinary attention that has been paid me and my work. I have been made to forget that this is a foreign land and I am happy to take this opportunity to express my appreciation."

When Mr. Sorolla came to this country it was at the request of Archer M. Huntington of New York that he show his paintings in the museum of the Hispanic Society. The exhibition drew great througs of persons and led to sales amounting to at least $300,000. Then he brought his pictures to Boston and showed them in other cities. There is authority for the statement that Mr. Sorolla's revenue from other sources has been $200,000. He does not expect to return next year.

BUT 15 DAYS IN TOUR RACE

THERE are only fifteen days left in the AMERICAN'S great World Tour contest. Just two weeks from to-day, Friday, June 25, the last voting coupons will be published, and subscriptions will be received up till midnight of June 26.

This is the real home stretch of the race. THIS is the time for action. Gather in your subscriptions, boys and girls; bring them in to the Around-the-World department, and get credit for your votes. Improve your standing; make a showing in the list which is printed every Sunday, so that you can prove to your friends what real value their assistance has been to you.

Do not forget, if you want your name in the Roll of Honor, that after this Sunday there will be only one more publication of the standing of the contestants—on June 20, and then will come the publication of the winners on July 4.

Keep that in mind. It is very important. Good standing in that list means much easier work in the gathering of the subscriptions. All the world loves a hustler, all the world loves a winner. You CAN be a winner if you will only try hard enough.

Wonderful Opportunity.

There isn't anyone that will deny, with any justice or with any weight of reason, that the tours which are offered the school children of New England this Summer will be a wonderful opportunity for every contestant.

The four boys that go racing around the world, with escorts of their own selection, will be given an opportunity that never comes to many people. They will be given a chance to MAKE themselves, and, better yet, every chance will be given to them to be successful in the effort.

These trips will be more to those boys than trips around the world. They may prove to be the beginning of the long trip along the RIGHT path in life.

The four girls that go to Europe, with chaperones of their own selection, will be given an opportunity to see life abroad, traveling in style such as is only possible to persons of great means. They will travel in the best style that money affords.

These trips will prove an education that cannot be equalled—complete, unique, all-embracing in giving an insight into life. The boys and girls will mingle with the older peoples of continental Europe, and with the races that are just awakening to the life we know on the other side of the world. They will see old races and they will see new races. They will live with them, and their ways will be the ways of the boys and girls that make these trips.

Great American Tours.

The twenty-five boys and the twenty-five girls who will, with escorts and chaperones of their own picking, go on the American sight-seeing trips to New York, Washington and Niagara Falls, will see for themselves many places and many sights that they have heard about and studied about in their schoolrooms. They will see the many historical spots and places of religious, artistic and other interest with which that part of the country they will traverse abounds. It will be a glorious vacation for them, full of interest, full of life, and, the same as the other and major prizes, full of tremendous educational benefits.

Now is the time for action, if you want to win one of these great tours. Roll up the subscriptions; they are what count. You need them, too, in order to make a creditable showing in the voting. Remember that there are fifty-eight prizes offered. Any one of them is within your reach. That roll of honor—containing the twenty-nine leading boys and twenty-nine leading girls—is easily accessible to every boy and girl who is qualified to vote.

Grown-ups Interested.

The parents and grown-up friends of the candidates are beginning to take deep interest in the proceedings, many of them conducting personal campaigns for the boys and girls, and with good results.

A notable instance of what it is possible for a parent to do is shown in the case of Moss Morris, No. 101 Waumbeck street, Roxbury, the father of the boy who has led in the voting since the start. Both father and son work day and night in gathering subscriptions. Very few subscriptions gathered by this pair are less than for a year, while in some instances they run to three or four years. That their plan is a good one is evidenced by the boy's standing in the contest.

Another instance is the case of William Ray, No. 1 Summer place, Roxbury, whose daughter has proved one of the surprises in the voting. Mr. Ray is an employe of the Boston Elevated Railway, and by means of subscription parties and personal canvass he has succeeded in placing his daughter in seventh place. Yesterday he brought in another bundle of 20,000 votes. Father and daughter are determined that the name Ray shall be among the winners of the European tours.

Heeger Adds 50,000.

A bright chap in the contest, and one who has made his mark, is Chester W. Heeger, who has been in the front ranks since early in the voting. This boy is a deaf mute, but through his father, M. L. Heeger, has projected a vigorous campaign for subscriptions. The most recent effort was a dance given at Braintree Hall, in Allston. This latest stunt netted Heeger close to 50,000 votes in subscriptions.

J. Sallinger, father of Leo W. Sallinger, is another of those who is plugging hard, and has succeeded in securing for his son a most enviable position in the roll of honor.

In practically every instance, particularly in the leaders in the voting, the parents and grown friends of the candidates are working just as hard and as earnestly as the candidates themselves, and there is good reason for it. The winners will have the privilege of selecting, the boys their own male escorts and the girls their own chaperones. Thus some ONE of their grown-up friends or relatives has a special incentive to work, has just as much at stake, as the candidate himself or herself.

Mother Works Hard.

Mrs. M. Whitman, the mother of H. L. Whitman, a prominent contender for first place among the boys, made a trip to Providence, R. I., where she started as vigorous a campaign as she conducted with such success in Boston. She succeeded in interesting Mmes. Brooks and Kapland, prominent charitable workers of Providence, in her son's candidacy, and the first two days' work resulted in twenty-five yearly subscriptions. The Whitmanites declare that they will land their favorite in first place, and will leave no stone unturned to secure that result.

Miss Florence Jackson, No. 15 Osgood street, Somerville, was the heroine in a surprise party at her home. Features of the programme were musical numbers by Misses Beatrice Turner and Rose Hunzelman and Messrs. Alexander Babineau, William Meaney and Louis Bell.

L. B. McManus, No. 318 Columbus avenue, Boston, is one of the pluggers lower down the list who is determined to get into the list of the "Big 29," and turns in one or more subscriptions every day. That kind of work usually spells "success."

GIRLS HURT IN WILD JOY RIDE

NEW YORK, June 11.—Invited into an automobile at Fulton and Hoyt streets, Brooklyn, early to-day, Miss Catherine Gleason, No. 87 Sands street, and Miss Marion Doyle, No. 279 Schermerhorn street, were compelled by two men to take part in a wild "joy ride" and were finally hurled into the street from the machine and severely injured.

Before throwing Miss Doyle out of the car the men made an attempt to kidnap her. They wrapped a blanket about her head, gagged her and then started away. But she struggled with such desperation that they were compelled to give up their attempt.

Miss Doyle and Miss Gleason are show girls. The company with which they were travelling disbanded several days ago. They came to Manhattan with friends last evening, and returning early to-day they entered a doorway at Fulton and Hoyt streets to avoid the rain. Just then the automobile came along. One of the men in it wore a fur coat. He was about twenty-four years old. The other wore a gray suit. He was about thirty.

"Want us to take you home, girls?" the men called out to them. They thanked the pair and entered the machine. Then followed the "joy ride," during which half a dozen policemen tried to stop the speeding car.

BOSTON-OWNED BARK IS WRECKED ON REEF

The Boston-owned bark Freeman has been wrecked on Cordilleras reef, near Fajardo, Porto Rico, according to advices received at this port. The bark was under charter to load molasses for Boston and had received 1,000 barrels at San Juan. In charge of a local pilot she was bound for Manuabo to complete loading when she crashed on the treacherous reef.

THE SOPHISTICATED ROMANCE OF TWO AND A THIRD—A swiftly moving tale of events on board an ocean liner. This fascinating story will appear in the Literary Section of the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

WRITER HELPS CAPT. SARTORIS

NEW YORK, June 11.—Verification of the rumor that Captain Algernon Sartoris, grandson of General U. S. Grant, had been forced to resign as secretary to the American legation in Guatemala is forthcoming. Edwin Emerson, who wrote a magazine article telling certain diplomatic secrets which it was said had been given to him by Captain Sartoris, makes the announcement.

Mr. Emerson denies that Captain Sartoris was the source of information from which the material for the article came, saying:

"It is a fact that I had the pleasure of meeting Captain Sartoris in Guatemala last year, but I am in no wise indebted to him for any information gained by me concerning our diplomatic affairs there. This statement has already been made by me to the State Department, and I make the same statement for publication in justice to Captain Sartoris."

Judge Lacombe in the United States District Court issued a temporary injunction restraining Ramon Bengoechea, Consul-General of Guatemala, from buying up and suppressing the June number of the magazine which contains the article arraigning the Guatemalan Government for alleged inhuman treatment of Americans. Mr. Emerson and the publisher of the magazine asked for the injunction.

"Every instance of cruelty which I described was carefully investigated and proved throughout," said Mr. Emerson yesterday.

Captain Sartoris, with his wife, sailed for Paris Wednesday on the Oceanic. They have been visiting Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, the Captain's mother, in this city. The Captain and his wife will join Mrs. Sartoris's mother in France.

BOSTON MAN WINS PRIZE AS AUTHOR

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—Announcement has been made by the American Sunday School Union that Malcolm L. MacPhail of Boston won the first prize of $600 for the best book on the attractiveness of the Bible, the title of his work being "The Magnetism of the Bible." The second prize of $400 was won by George Huntington of Northfield, Minn., whose book is entitled "The Attractiveness of the Bible: An Appreciation."

SAUSAGE TAX MUST BE PAID

What is the difference between bologna sausage and sausage-bologna? Bologna sausage pays a duty of 25 per cent. as preserved meat and sausage-bologna is admitted duty free.

Wing Sing Lung & Co. imported from China in 1903 a quantity of bologna sausage. The Treasury Department clapped a duty of 25 per cent. on it as preserved meat. The importers protested. The situation revolved around the meaning of the phrase, "sausage bologna" in the tariff bill of 1897, which places it on the free list. Judge Lowell, in the United States Court, now holds that it meant bologna sausage, commercially known by that name, and as the Chinese sausage was something which had not been considered then, it must be held to be preserved meat.

A REAL MONKEY COLLEGE.

The wonderful things Washington scientists are discovering about our cousins are told in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

BOGUS LORD'S MUMMY AN 'AD'

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 11.—Standing erect in a room in the rear of the undertaking establishment of Nolan, Brown & Co. of this city is the embalmed and now almost mummified body of the man known as Sidney Lascelles, the bogus Lord Beresford.

The body was embalmed six years ago, and is now as stiff as a board. When laid between two chairs, with only the head and feet touching, it will not bend. The undertakers say the man came here from Norfolk, representing himself to be Lord Beresford, and that when he died they embalmed the body on the supposition that the man's wealthy relatives would care for it.

Cablegrams were sent to Lord Beresford in England and no response was received. The undertakers now admit the man was an imposter and are keeping the body as a proof of their skill in embalming.

THE DERELICT'S PASSENGER.

Poetic justice is dealt out to the owner of rotten ships and employer of four dumb sailors in this story in the Literary Section of the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

COREYS HURT IN AUTO CRAS

PARIS, June 11.—Mr. and Mrs. William E. Corey are nursing bruises to-day, while a friend is seriously injured, as the result of an automobile accident.

The Coreys were going from their chateau of Vilgenis, in the vicinity of Paris to luncheon at the Germany Embassy, when, about three miles out, the automobile became unmanageable and the three occupants were thrown out.

Mr. Corey received a bruising and a few cuts and his wife slight injuries. Their friend whose name is Bonnerol, was the most hurt and serious internal injuries are feared.

Assistance was rendered by peasants of a nearby village, who provided a conveyance for the return to the chateau. M. Bonnerol was taken back on a stretcher.

HORSE SINKS IN MIRE.

When Alfred Lyons went to a pasture on Eastern avenue, Dedham, to-day to get Billy, a horse owned by Robert White of Dwight street, he found Billy's ears sticking out of a mire of mud. It took five men and another horse to dig and pull the horse out.

ILLIONAIRE TO RUN DOWN LETTER CRANK

Placards offering $100 reward have been posted in Walpole by Charles S. Bird, the millionaire proprietor of the big paper mills there, for the discovery of the writer of anonymous threatening letters to himself and employes.

In one of the letters which was sent to George Wyman, superintendent of the box factory, it was threatened that he would be crippled, the eyes of his son put out and his residence burned, unless certain men who had been discharged were put back to work.

The State police and private detectives have been placed on the case and it is expected that arrests will be made at any time. The residents of the place have been considerably frightened by the threats and there has been considerable talk of the "Black Hand," but it is not believed that this greatly dreaded organization had anything to do with the letters.

Philip R. Allen, superintendent of the mills, has placed a notice in conspicuous places all through the various buildings, in the two postoffices and on public notice boards, in which he says:

"Letters unsigned, threatening some of our employes and their families, have been written within the last few months. We believe that you are all opposed to such practice, and that you will help us eradicate it. We offer a reward of $100 for evidence which will lead to the connection of any one guilty, writing anonymous, threatening or insulting letters."

Mr. Bird wrote this upon the complaint of the superintendent of the box factory, whose son a few evenings ago found a sealed letter upon the doorsill of his residence opposite East Walpole Station. This letter was placed in the hands of a detective, and it is likely the identity of the writer will be disclosed in a few days.

The handwriting is better than the average and went around in a circle. Another letter was sent to Charles S. Bird asking him to discharge George Poor, superintendent of the parold mill, and unless he did this within a month the mill would be damaged.

George Wyman is popular in the town and is one of the selectmen. The letter that be received is supposed to come from some crank whom he has offended. Philip Allen, the manager, said: "There is no sign of the Black Hand in these letters, and as we are dealing constantly with a large force of men, some one among them has become disgruntled and takes this way of showing it."

The employees, who have been threatened, will be protected for weeks, as they fear harm.

Nervous Headaches

Nobody who has not endured the suffering caused by nervous headaches can realize the awful agony of its victims.

Worst of all, the ordinary treatment cannot be relied upon to cure nor even to give relief that is permanent. Some doctors will say that if a person is subject to these headaches there is nothing that will prevent their recurrence.

Nervous headaches, as well as neuralgia, are caused by lack of nutrition—the nerves are starved. Feed the nerves by furnishing through the blood the elements which they require and the cause of these nervous troubles is removed. The only way to feed the nerves is through the blood and it is in this way that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have accomplished so many remarkable cures.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box; six boxes, $2.50, by Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Irish in Commons Cost Asquith Votes

LONDON—A great fight on the second reading of the finance bill, which is incorporated in the budget proposals, ended in the defeat of an opposition motion to reject by a vote of 366 to 209. The Government's normal majority is about 220. The reduction was owing to the Irish members voting with the opposition. A petition from the Lord Mayor and sheriffs of Dublin called the attention of the House to a violation of the act of union by the proposals of the finance bill. The presentation of the petition was received with Nationalist cheers.

U. S. Protests to China.

PEKIN—The United States has protested against certain objectionable features of the recently negotiated railway loan, a clause especially objectionable being that which reserves to the contracting banks an option on future loans for Chinese branch lines. The stand is taken to mean that the principle of the open door must be maintained. There was a formal protest against preference being shown German, English and French material.

German Ship Sinks in Crash.

HULL.—The British steamer Humber sank the German steamer Modena in a collision in the North Sea. Two members of the German crew were drowned. The Humber's bows were stove in, but she was able to make port. The ships came together in weather so heavy that their lights were obscured. The bows of the British steamer crashed almost through the other ship and the latter went down in a few minutes.

Yankees Triumph at Horse Show.

LONDON—C. W. Watson of Baltimore and Judge W. H. Moore of New York and Massachusetts continued their triumphs at the horse show, each winning several prizes. Walter Winans was first in Class 83. His Launcelot was second and his Londesborough third in the same contest, making a clean sweep.

French Cruiser Lost?

TOULON—No official news has been received of the armored cruiser Jules Ferry, which left Turkish waters for Toulon sixteen days ago. The last information was that the cruiser was leaking badly. The Jules Ferry is of 12,750 tons and carries a crew of 728 men.

War Talk Affects Market.

LONDON—The speeches by Lord Rosebery, Sir Edward Grey and Arthur Balfour on the need of systematic measures for defence are having a depressing effect financially. Consols have fallen a full point since the first of the week.

To Air Round Table Scandal.

BERLIN—By order of the Berlin police, Prince Philip zu Eulenburg has left Bad Gastein for Berlin. His retrial for perjury in connection with the Round Table scandal is expected to begin immediately.

Castro Must Give Up Guns.

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao—President Gomez of Venezuela has said he would allow Celestino Castro, brother of the deposed President, to return to Venezuela provided he will turn over to the government the 6,000 rifles he has on Colombian territory.

Four Killed by Plague.

CARACAS—Two new cases of bubonic plague are officially reported, four having died. Colombia has abolished all import duties on Venezuelan products.

Condemns European Barbarism.

LONDON—At the Imperial Press conference Lord Morley, referring to what he termed the "rebarbarism of Europe—the rattling back into arms and the preparation to use arms," argued "that the English tongue is a stronger, more enduring bond of imperial union than anything else, a thousand times stronger than all the achievements of soldiers and sailors and the statesmen who directed them."

Kaiser to Cut Red Tape.

BERLIN—Emperor William, as King of Prussia, issued a decree appointing a commission to report upon decentralizing and simplifying the system of government. The methods are cumbersome and slow.

GIFT TO CHIEF GRADY.

Senior Deputy Chief Grady, who was transferred under the recent order of Fire Commissioner Parker to the house of engine 25, Fort Hill square, was the recipient of a massive floral horseshoe, the gift of his many friends in and out of the department.

PLAN TO AVERT TRAIN WRECKS

New rules governing the running of trains will go into effect June 21 on the Boston & Maine Railroad, when the change of time for the Summer schedule occurs. It is the intention of the officials to avert every possible collision. Heretofore, when a train order was issued, the conductor and engineer of the train received the order, for which they signed. They then proceeded, after reading their order to the other members of the train crew. The new rules state that the order shall be given to the conductor, for which he will sign, and he is to make every member of his train crew familiar with the order before he proceeds.

For the purpose of averting wrecks, which are oftentimes caused by the similarity of names of stations, every station of the railroad which has two syllables is being changed to one syllable.

White flags will be used for protecting crossings instead of yellow flags, as heretofore. For cautionary or slow signals, yellow flags will be used, instead of green flags.

JULIA FRENCH IN NEWPORT RUNAWAY

NEWPORT, R. I., June 11.—Miss Julia French, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Amos T. French and a niece of Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, was inclined to treat lightly to-day a runaway accident from which she escaped with a few bruises. Miss French was thrown down head first into a ditch into water several feet in depth. She was stunned but regained presence of mind sufficiently to drag herself to the bank.

Twain's Three Rules for Girls:

DON'T== SMOKE—TO EXCESS DRINK—TO EXCESS MARRY—TO EXCESS

BALTIMORE, June 11.—Mark Twain attended the graduation exercises at St. Timothy's School, a fashionable institution for girls, but one of the first themes that occupied his attention was the charge that he pilfered for "Is Shakespeare Dead?" a chapter from another book.

Among the things he told the young women are the following:

"There are three things that you should never do on any account.

"Don't smoke—that is, not to excess. I am seventy-three and have always smoked during my seventy-three years to excess.

"Don't drink—that is, to excess.

"Don't marry—that is, to excess.

"Now, if you young ladies refrain from all these things you will have all the virtues that any one will honor and respect."

"Another thing I want to say, and that is that honesty is the best policy," he continued.

"I remember when I had just written 'Innocents Abroad,' when I and my partner wanted to start a newspaper syndicate. We needed $3 and did not know where to get it. While we were in a quandry I espied a valuable dog on the street. I picked up the canine and sold him to a man for $3. Afterward the owner of the dog came along and I got $3 from him for telling him where the dog was. So I went back and gave the $3 to the man whom I sold it to, and I have lived honestly ever since."

He made an explanation of the charge against him, the substance of which was that the whole thing was a mistake and that the publishers are now trying to make capital out of it at his expense. He said:

"I wish to say that in writing my book I took the liberty of using large extracts from Mr. Greenwood's book, 'The Shakespeare Problem Re-stated.'"

"I made use of the extracts because of the great admiration which I have for that book and with the full permission of the publishers. I added a footnote, in which I gave full credit to the author and publishers. Somewhere, nobody seems to know where, the footnote was lost, probably in the composing room.

"But, of course, the John Lane Publishing Company of England, the publishers of Mr. Greenwood's book, are good advertisers and have only one object to life, and that is to make money.

"Now, one of Mark Twain's books, so they tell me, is considered worth while reading. I know, at any rate, that my books have always sold well. But to have a man like Mark Twain steal portions from another man's book makes that book something extraordinary.

"Messrs. Lane are well aware of these facts, and it is to be regretted that a mistake in the mechanical department of another publishing house should be made much of to accuse falsely one who has won fame in the literary world and to put in a false light another who is the most modest and retiring of men."

M'DONOUGH GIRL TO BE DEPORTED

Immigration officials at Washington have ordered that Sarah McDonough, the young girl who came to Boston from Ireland to consult an eye specialist, must be deported. She may be sent out of the country on the Laurentian, scheduled to sail for Moville and Glasgow to-day. A telegram from Senator Lodge stated that his effort to have the girl landed under bond was not successful.

QUEEN GUEST OF AMERICANS

LONDON, June 11.—Two of the most fashionable events that London has seen this year were given when the Duchess of Manchester entertained the Queen as her guest at a large dinner, at her Grosvenor Square mansion, and the Countess Granard's dinner, which followed.

Queen Alexandra went to the Countess Granard's with Princess Victoria, and only those of the Queen's set were invited, as Her Majesty is very punctilious as to who she meets. The Russian Ambassador and his daughter, Countess Nathalie Benckendorff, several marquises, the Duchess of Portland, Lady Victoria Cavendish Bentnick, the Duchess of Rutland, Lady Marjorie Manners, Mrs. Willie James, Miss Millie James and Lady Gosford were in attendance upon the Queen.

The Countess Granard looked charming in a white satin gown with diamond ornaments. The guests included the Spanish Ambassador and Mme. de Villa Urrultia, Duke and Duchess of Roxborough, Marquis de Villalobar, Lady Muriel Willoughby, Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Rochfort Maguire and D. O. Mills.

ON "SKIDOO" TRACK AT UNLUCKY TIME

While backing in on track 23 at the South station the 6:16 train for Braintree crashed through the bumper at the end of the track and came to a stop just short of the gate. The train, composed of six cars, was empty. The steps on the rear platform of the last car were demolished, but aside from this little damage was done to the train.

TAFT PRAISES THE WRIGHTS

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The appreciation, good will and congratulations of the American people were manifested to Wilbur and Orville Wright, the American aviators, by the President of the United States, when he presented to the aviators the gold medals awarded to the Wright Brothers by the Aero Club of America to commemorate the conquest of the air. In the presence of statesmen, diplomats, the members of the cabinet, noted scientists and prominent aeronauts and aviators, the two inventors of the first successful flying machine heavier than air received the first public recognition of their achievements from their fellow countrymen.

President Taft, in handing the medals to the brothers, expressed keen admiration for their work. He ventured the belief that their flying machine will be the basis for the future aerial craft, and he made the prophecy that the dawn of the age of flight is here.

$50,000 FIRE IN PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, June 11.—Fire in the furniture store of the Anthony & Powell Co., No. 243 Weybosset street, in the heart of the business section, to-day, gave the firemen a stubborn battle and caused a loss of $50,000, most of which was by water.

Flames were discovered in the carpet department on the fifth floor just before the time for opening the store. One man was overcome by smoke and was rescued by his comrades.

After an hour's work the fire was under control, although for a time it threatened to spread to adjoining buildings. The four lower floors were flooded with water.

LEO ONE OF GREATEST POPES, TAFT DECLARES, TELLING OF HIS VISIT

WASHINGTON, June 11.—President Taft gave a vivid mental picture of Pope Leo XIII, and declared that lamented prelate to have been one of the greatest popes that ever occupied the papal chair, in the course of his address before the congress of Roman Catholic missionaries, in describing his visit to the vatican a few years ago as the representative of the United States in the settlement of the Philippine friar lands question.

"I had the honor of being received by Leo XIII," said the President, "one of the greatest popes that ever sat in that chair, and a man of such high intellectual character, such broad abilities that I shall always congratulate myself on having had the opportunity to come into his presence and meet him.

"I had supposed he, at 92 years of age, was only a figure at the head of the church, and that we should really be turned over to the cardinals who really conducted church matters, but my mind was quickly disabused on that point, for as soon as I was brought into his presence I found a most alert old gentleman, quick in movement, quick in intellectual appreciation of what was said to him and intensely interested in the subject which it was my honor and my opportunity to present.

Mind Was Active.

"After an address had been made to him for some thirty minutes, he responded in French in fifteen or twenty minutes, showing that he had caught all the points that were made, that he was fully alive to the importance of the issue and that he proposed to have a good deal to say about how that issue should be settled."

Speaking of the failure to reach a definite agreement at Rome, the President told how the Pope expressed his disappointment, but he delegated one of his agents to the Philippines and the matter was finally adjusted. And the President added that the question os subsequently settled was satisfactory to both sides, "so that there is not to-day in the Philippine Islands an existing question; no 'snake heads,' as Governor Wright was in the habit of calling them, that can rise to trouble the civil or the church government in those islands."

The keynote of President Taft's address was thta complete church emulation is a good thing, and that there should be in this country "no invidious distinctions in elections because of religious beliefs."

Cheers for Taft.

After being introduced by Fr. Doyle, who referred to the President as "the great harmonizer," Mr. Taft, who had been applauded loudly as he entered the hall, was greeted by another outburst of applause.

He spoke principally of the work of settlement in the Philippines, of the difficulties caused by the close relationship there between church and government. He expressed the opinion that in the end the church would be strengthened by the change there, "as freedom and toleration and the complete separation of church and state have strengthened the church in this country."

Referring to his visit to the pope and to the final settlement of the church problems in the Philippines, he declared that few extremists in this country had found any exception to them.

"But I venture to say," added the President, "that this visit to Rome forty years ago would have sunk any administration responsible for it, which only goes to show that this country is broad enough for all denominations to work together for the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man and for all of us to live here as American citizens and that we should make no invidious distinctions in elections because of religious belief."

Strife at an End.

He said that there is now no question to be settled in the Philippines concerning the relation of church and government. He said it is a good thing for the Roman Catholic Church that there are other denominations in the Philippines that "complete church emulation; competition, if I may use that term, is a good thing in religion, as well as in other things in life."

SCIENTISTS TO BUILD CHURCH

The Christian Scientist congregation in Cambridge is planning to build the finest house of worship in the University City. The news that the Simmons estate, No. 1,582 Massachusetts avenue, at present occupied by Professor Frederic W. Putnam, recently of Harvard and Radcliffe, has been purchased as the site for the new church comes as a surprise, for the negotiations were conducted with the greatest secrecy.

The Simmons estate is owned jointly by Mrs. Louisa M. Simmons of Manchester, N. H., and her sister, Mrs. Charles Cobleigh of North Harvard street, Allston. Mrs. Cobleigh to-day confirmed the fact of the sale and said that while the papers had not passed, the negotiations were concluded.

The estate consists of 10,480 square feet of land and was assessed for $10,000, the old mansion on the place being assessed for $3,000 more. The Cambridge Scientists have been worshipping in Brattle Hall, Brattle street.

IRISH MOURN LOSS OF PATRICK M'HUGH

At a largely attended meeting of Boston Central Branch of the United Irish League at the American House resolutions were adopted expressing sorrow at the death of Patrick A. McHugh, member of Parliament for North Sligo. Those who addressed the meeting were Judge Augustine J. Daly, president of the branch, Christopher I. Fitzgerald, Mgr. O'Callaghan, Michael Magnes, Colonel Roger F. Scannell, Dr. T. J. Dillon, Dr. P. J. Timmins, Mark H. Crehan, M. A. Toland, John O'Callaghan and Michael Morrison.

BRYAN CANDIDATE FOR U. S. SENATE

OMAHA, Neb., June 11.—William J. Bryan will be a candidate for the United States Senate, to succeed Elmer J. Burkett, the present incumbent, a Republican. Such is the statement made by Richard L. Metcalfe, the editor of Mr. Bryan's Commoner. This is the first positive announcement that has been made of the candidacy of Mr. Bryan for the Senate, though it does not come as any surprise.

WOMAN KILLED BY MOWING OF LAWN

YORKVILLE, Ill., June 11.—Mrs. Elizabeth Gertrude Sheridan, twenty-six years of age, of this city, lies dead to-day in a hospital in Aurora as a direct result of cutting the grass on her lawn with a lawnmower. She had never attempted to mow the lawn before, and had barely finished when she fainted. She died in twenty-four hours of septic peritonitis, complicated by lockjaw.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH NEWPORT? You can find out in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Miss Maude Adams as Joan of Arc, on the white steed she will ride in the performance of Schiller's drama at the Harvard Stadium.

15,500 TO SEE MAUDE ADAMS

From present indications the audience that will assemble in the Stadium of Harvard on the night of June 22 to witness Maude Adams's performance of "Joan of Arc" will be the largest and most distinguished gathering ever brought together for a theatrical performance on American soil. Two extra sections have been added to the already enormous capacity of the Stadium, so that 15,500 persons will have places in the immense amphitheatre.

Places of honor have been reserved for President Lowell, the faculty of the university, former President Eliot and new German ambassador, Count Johann von Bernstorff.

Concerning a rumor that Miss Adams was to receive an honorary degree from Harvard, Secretary Jerome D. Greene of the Harvard Corporation to-day said: "I have never heard of Harvard conferring a degree upon a woman, and so far as I know the rule has not been changed."

SHUBERTS GET BOND SITE FOR THEATRE

By next Thanksgiving the Shubert Holding Company of New York plans to complete a magnificent theatre at the corner of Tremont street and Beaver place on the foundation built by the late Charles H. Bond for his proposed Lyric Theatre. The sale of the land has been completed, Lee Shubert and an attorney coming here from New York. J. C. F. Slayton and others, trustees of the Bond estate, gave the title. The site measures 19,145 square feet of land and it was assessed at $153,700.

$27,300 PAID FOR HOPPNER PORTRAIT

LONDON, June 11.—Sir John Milburn's collection of the early English masters and the masters of the Barbizon school realized high prices at Christie's. One hundred and eighteen paintings brought $185,000. Hoppner's portrait of the beautiful Lady Langham sold for $27,300. A tiny Corot, depicting the environs of Darleux, brought $12,600; another Corot, "Une Symphonie," $12,600, and Corot's "Coup de Vent," $8,400. At Sotherby's collection letters written by King George III. realized $1,375. They were bought for an American collector. They are valuable historically because they contain interesting references to the American Revolution.

OV. DRAPER SIGNS BOSTON CHARTER BILL

Governor Draper signed the Boston charter bill at 11 o'clock to-day. With the exception of some clauses which are specially provided for in the bill to take effect later, the bill becomes a law in thirty days.

The measure reached the Governor yesterday just as he was about to leave the State House. He signed it immediately after he reached his office to-day. It is substantially in the form in which it went to the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs from the hands of the lieutenants of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

Under the provisions of this bill the city is allowed to choose one of two forms of charter under which it is to be governed. The city must take one or the other regardless of the fact that many people do not like either. No matter which plan is decided upon, when the plans are voted upon next Fall the State political machines get a better grip on the city than they have now.

The plan selected will have a lot to do with the selection of the next Mayor of Boston. The present form of direct nomination of the candidates for Mayor under both plans is killed, and the choice is left to the voters as to whether they prefer the convention plan, in which they are allowed to select the delegates, or the petition plan.

Governor Draper signed the bill with two quills, so that Senator J. Howell Crosby of Arlington and Representative Grafton D. Cushing, Senate and House chairmen respectively on the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, could each have one.

The Committee on Metropolitan Affairs reported the bill. Representative Cushing led the fight in the House and Senator Crosby in the Senate. In signing the bill the Governor wrote "Eben S." with one quill and "Draper" with the other.

STRANDED SHIP'S CREW IN A MUTINY

NEW YORK, June 11.—After a night of carousing on board the Spanish steamship Antonio Lopez, which is aground off Fire Island, the crew of the big boat mutinied to-day. The men demanded that they be taken ashore at once and threatened to kill the officers and seize the small boats.

There were 150 men in the crew against less than a score of officers. When the mutineers began making threats the officers drew revolvers and ordered them up on the forward deck.

"We will give you five minutes to get there," was the ultimatum. "Any man who doesn't obey will be killed." With muttered threats, the crew slowly obeyed.

The mutiny could be plainly seen from ashore, where life savers and others stood around huge bonfires. When the life savers visited the steamship to-day Captain Petro Mir told them of the trouble. He said that the firemen started the trouble by demanding to be put ashore but that within a few hours after they had been driven to the forward deck they regained their senses.

The Lopez lay in a dangerous position to-day. She was in two fathoms of water and listed dangerously on her starboard side. To add to the peril of the situation a heavy sea began running.

The huge liner at low tide was only two hundred yards from shore, and according to the life-savers of the Point o' Woods, who have been on constant duty, she is in imminent danger of going to pieces unless hauled off shortly. With all her passengers taken off in small boats, the liner is grounded on an outer bar and the action of the sea has washed the sand from beneath the bow and stern. Her present position was considered extremely perilous, it being feared she would break in two.

To prevent the liner from drifting further ashore, Captain Mir ordered the ballast tanks filled with water.

GIRL ARTIST OF WORCESTER NAMED IN SUIT

Miss Clara Wheeler, a young and accomplished artist of Worcester, is named as correspondent in a suit for divorce which has just been brought by Mrs. Joseph A. Jones of Brooklyn against her husband, the proprietor of an automobile garage of Jamaica, L. I.

The filing of the suit has caused a sensation in Worcester and other Massachusetts and Connecticut cities, where Miss Wheeler is widely known.

Many sketches, each bearing a humorous caption, said to have been written by Miss Wheeler, were received by Jones during the Winter of 1906. These form an important item in the evidence of the wife. One is a drawing of a bear embracing a child. Below it is written:

> Bear, bear, don't go away
> To come again some other day;
> I will love you if you stay,
> I will love you anyway.

Another sketch bears the avowal: "I want to be loved. Meet me at the lake after dark." It is signed "Your ownest Valentine."

Jones, it is declared, met the fascinating young artist on a New York, New Haven & Hartford train and it "was a case of love at first sight." Testimony as to a pair of "loud check" trousers which Jones is said to have worn will be used in the divorce proceedings to prove his wife's contentions.

Tells Love for Another.

According to one of the affidavits in the case, Miss Wheeler, after having won the heart of the Brooklyn automobile man, was accepting attentions from another when Jones ran across them in Fifth avenue, New York, and a scene followed that Jones feared would call for the attention of the Gotham police.

"In January, 1902," says Mrs. Jones in her complaint, "my husband went to Worcester on business, and some two months later I followed. We stayed there until the fall of 1906, residing at the Aurora Hotel. At that time my husband concluded his business engagement. We returned to Brooklyn and have since resided at Tompkins avenue and Macon street.

"About a month after our return I noticed that my husband was irritable, at times despondent. He ignored me as much as he could, and his treatment convinced me that he had grown weary of me. I finally asked him for an explanation of his conduct, telling him I thought some woman had come between us.

"He admitted that he loved another woman deeply; that he could not give her up, and that he would support me if I would leave the city and trouble him no longer. He said he had not loved me for three years. I immediately left the house and have not seen my husband since.

"Two years later I went to Worcester with my sister, Mrs. Lillian J. Hunt, who visited with me the home of a Mrs. Dilworth at No. 40 Wellington street. I suspected that my husband had been residing at her house. She admitted that a lady and gentleman who were known as Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler had been boarding with her. I procured a photograph of Miss Wheeler and showed it to Mrs. Dilworth, who was certain that it was a good likeness of one of her former boarders. My husband Mrs. Dilworth could not identify from the picture which I showed her.

Take Testimony in Worcester.

"The identification of my husband fell to Dr. James Cook, who recalled having attended a Mrs. Wheeler one night the previous Winter. When shown a picture of Mr. Jones, which had been taken at Worcester, the doctor at once recognized the clothes as those he had seen hanging on a chair. These clothes were of a peculiar check—sometimes called 'loud.'"

Attached to Mrs. Jones's papers is an affidavit made by Mrs. Lillian J. Hunt, of No. 101 Macon street, Brooklyn, sister of the plaintiff.

"Mr. Jones told us that he had first met Clara J. Wheeler while traveling on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad," says Mrs. Hunt. "It had been love at first sight, he said, and this sentiment had continued until the afternoon before our interview, extending over a visit he had paid to Miss Wheeler at the home of her father in Putnam, Ct."

Mrs. Jones's lawyer moved before Justice Kelly of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, for the appointment of a commission to take testimony at Worcester. The motion was granted. Jones is thirty-five years old. Miss Wheeler is said to be under twenty-five.

TWO FUNERAL SERVICES FOR DR. E. E. HALE

The arrangements for the funeral of the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale were completed at noon to-day, following the arrival of his son, Edward Everett Hale, Jr., from Schenectady, N. Y. The services will take place Sunday afternoon and will be of a two-fold nature.

Services will be held in the South Congregational Church, at Exeter and Newbury streets, of which Dr. Hale was the active pastor for forty-four years, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. These will be private, only the members of the family and representatives from the various societies and organizations of which Dr. Hale was an active member being present.

Simultaneously with the services in the South Congregational Church other services will be held in the Park Street Church. These will be for the public. Addresses will be delivered by prominent men in the different associations of which Dr. Hale was a member. The public is cordially invited to these services.

The private services in the South Congregational Church will be conducted by Rev. Edward Cummings, pastor of the church, and the Rev. Dr. James De Normandie, pastor of the First Church of Roxbury.

The public will be given the opportunity to look upon the face of Dr. Hale for the last time Sunday morning. From half past ten o'clock until one the body will lie in state at the South Congregational Church. Ushers will be present all this time to take care of the throngs who will visit the church. No eulogy will be pronounced at the private services.

The arrangements for the funeral were made by Mrs. Hale, Edward Everett Hale, Jr., and Drs. Cummings and De Normandie.

TEXAS WIND BLOWS TRAIN OFF TRACK

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 11.—A report was received to-day that a passenger train on the Kansas City, Missouri & Orient Railroad was blown from the rails by a terrific wind that accompanied a heavy downpour near Knox City. According to advices received by the dispatcher's office of the Texas & Pacific Railroad, at least one person was killed and scores injured. The dead man was an express messenger named Woodruff, thought to be a resident of Merkle.

PLAN PIER HALF MILE INTO OCEAN

NEW YORK, June 11.—Contracts were signed by Frederick Thompson and John L. DeSaulles, which call for the immediate construction at Long Beach, Long Island, of the longest and most pretentious amusement pier ever built, at a cost of $1,250,000. Engineers who have been called in consultation have reported that it is entirely feasible to build the pier one-half a mile into the ocean. One of the features of the structure will be a convention hall, capable of seating 5,000 people.

NEW YORK POLICE USED PAPER CLUBS

NEW YORK, June 11.—The discovery that many of the dress clubs used by policemen are made of papier-mache and varnished and that the uniforms of the members of the force are composed of inferior cloth prompted Commissioner Bingham to order a new inspection of uniforms and equipment.

The Credit BOYLE BROS. 853 WASHINGTON STREET. SOUTH END DEPARTMENT STORE

Our Credit System

Our system of charging goods is just the same as any cash store that will trust you to pay by the month, only we give you longer time and you pay us a little each week.

We give you a savings account book, and when you want goods you can come here and have them put on your book. Your credit is good here any time. You have to pay nothing for these Credit Savings Books, and you can have anything you want charged on them, at the same price as if you paid cash.

We will trust you to pay us when you can. Pay a little each week on your account at our office, or we will send collector free of charge each week to your house or place of business. You have your choice of how you make your payments.

Largest stock to select from—lowest prices—just as cheap on credit as the cash stores—and the clothing just the same—and we allow you the privilege of having an account here and trust you to pay us a little each week on your clothing while you are wearing it and earning the money to pay for it.

As Cheap as Cash

We charge you nothing for this credit. It is the inducement we offer the wage-earners of Greater Boston, so they will buy here on credit from us instead of paying cash elsewhere. We could not do a big cash business here in the South End, so, in order to do a big credit business, we offer credit to all without extra expense. We sell on credit at the same bargain prices the cash customers pay at the big stores down town.

It's the Reliable Goods we sell at Low Prices on credit, and the kind of free credit we give to everybody who trades here, and the way we oblige our customers, that has built up our big business. We have everything now ready for Summer. Come and get one of our books and enjoy the advantage of the Greatest Credit System in the World, as originated by us.

Our Credit Books save you 10% on all the goods you buy on credit, as we sell you at the cash prices, which is 10% less than the instalment prices. We also pay you 4% interest on all the money you pay us weekly for your goods, which is the same interest you would get in any bank you would put your savings into.

Men's Suits $7.50 to $25 Women's Suits $10 to $25
Hats, Shoes, Millinery, Jewelry, Etc.

We give you credit at the big cash stores if you prefer to trade there. Our credit orders are good in any store in Boston and in all the big cash stores. REDMOND MAN WINS ELECTION

DUBLIN, June 11.—Thomas Lundon, Nationalist, has defeated John Maloney, Independent Nationalist, for member of Parliament from East Limerick.

Mr. Maloney had the support of Timothy Healy and his brother, Maurice Healy, who are both trying to form an independent wing of the Irish parliamentary party opposed to Mr. Redmond's leadership. The East Limerick contest is accepted by the country as proof that public confidence is strongly with Redmond.

PARAGON PARK IS READY FOR OPENING

Paragon Park opens to-morrow for the season. Manager Dodge is confident that the park de luxe at Nantasket will be more appreciated this year than ever before. The Palm Garden has been enlarged and redecorated, and lighted with a new electric system. Two bands, the Russian Operatic Band of seventy pieces and the All America Band of thirty pieces, are to conduct the open-air concerts. A Hungarian orchestra is to play in the Palm Garden. The circus this year, improved in every way, is to consist of two rings. The Paragon Opera Company will present "Pinafore" each afternoon and night in the new opera house.

GIRL VICTIM OF FIRE DYING

Miss Alice Shippie, seventeen years of age, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Shippie, of No. 848 Main street, Cambridgeport, is dying in the Cambridge Relief Hospital as the result of being burned from head to foot while preparing breakfast to-day.

Her mother, her sister, a Mrs. Webster and another woman, who rushed to the girl's relief and fought to extinguish the flames, are all suffering from burns on their hands and arms.

The girl was feeding the flames with paper when a burning scrap of paper fell to the floor at her feet unnoticed. The next instant the flames had seized on the light fabric of her wrapper and blazed up all around her.

With a shriek the girl began to tear wildly around the kitchen. "Save me! Save me!" she screamed, and her mother and sister, but scantily clad, rushed into the kitchen. They seized rugs and coats and anything they could pick up to smother the flames, which were rising high all about Alice.

The women threw the rugs upon the tortured girl and did everything they could to throw her down and roll the rugs around her.

Unable to stand the pain the girl suddenly broke from the grasp of her mother and sister and rushed down the stairs to the hallway of the flat below, all the time screaming in agony at the top of her voice.

Mrs. Webster and her sister ran out of their apartments and helped Mrs. Shippie and her daughter to throw blankets and rugs around the burning girl. By this time the fire had burned the wrapper and the other light garments with which Alice was clad and the women soon extinguished the flames.

The Relief Hospital ambulance was telephoned for and the girl hurried there. The physicians said she was burned from head to foot and that death was to be expected at any time.

LABEL KITES WITH "VOTES FOR WOMEN"

The little town of Bedford is to be invaded by Boston's most fashionable suffragists to-morrow, if the weather permits. This proviso is due to the fact that it is to be a gala attire red letter day. Mrs. Stanley McCormick of Commonwealth avenue, Mrs. John E. Crowley of Brookline, Mrs. Hartley Dennett and Mrs. R. Y. Fitz-Gerald are to be the speakers. One of the features will be the flying of kites labelled "Votes for women." The suffragists will take the 1:25 or the 1:51 train. Preliminary to the open-air meeting the suffragists have been all over the surrounding country, and have plastered every building and post with suffragist posters. Lincoln, Billerica, Concord and Lexington and Carlisle and Bedford are gleaming with the yellow placards.

WEDS PRETTY NURSE HE MET IN HOSPITAL

A romance of the Chelsea fire culminated in the wedding at No. 26 Hillside avenue, Melrose, of Alfred H. French and Miss Helen Louise McKean, a pretty nurse of the Melrose Hospital. French was injured at the big fire and was taken to the Melrose Hospita, where he fell under the tender care of Miss McKean. Young Doctor Cupid dropped in occasionally, making his visits more numerous as the patient convalesced and by the time French was well, the baby-faced marksman had marked him for his own. French is a Boston newspaper writer and his bride is from Nashua, N. H.

TO SEE TRY-OUT OF DE KOVEN PLAY

A party comprising many newspaper and theatrical men have gone in automobiles to Providence, where they will be the guests of the Comstock Amusement Company at the Providence Opera House, for the first performance to-night of "The Yankee Mandarin," the comic opera by Reginald De Koven and Edward Paulton. The piece is receiving a try-out in Providence in preparation for the opening at the Majestic Theatre Monday evening, when the play enters upon an all-summer's engagement.

TOM TUCKER IS TOO FLIPPANT IN COURT

NORTHAMPTON, June 11.—Tom Tucker, who was once first baseman for the Boston National team and a diamond star, was in danger of a fine or jail sentence for his flippancy while being cross-examined here in a law suit in which he was a witness. When called to the bench and reprimanded by Judge Stevens, Tucker explained that he had relapsed into a habit he had acquired on the coaching lines. He was allowed to go without punishment. Tucker found that a judge is more important than an umpire.

ARREST STRANGER WITH HANDCUFFS

Arrested to-day wearing a pair of handcuffs of ancient vintage, a strange man is puzzling the police of Waltham. About noon to-day the man was seen walking on the tracks of the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine Railroad from Riverside station toward Roberts. He disappeared into the woods, and was arrested as he emerged. The man refuses to give his name. He says he worked as a telegraph and 'phone lineman in Chicago. He is 5 feet 7 inches in height, weighs about 160 pounds, has a sandy complexion and mustache and wears shabby clothing.

BOY OF 8 TRIES TWICE TO END LIFE

NEW YORK, June 11.—Peter Mowry, only eight years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mowry of Bayonne, is to-day in a critical condition as the result of his second attempt in a week to end his own life. The child swallowed a bottle of metal polish and then stabbed himself in the breast with a pair of scissors. Earlier this week he took a bottle of shoe polish.

BEAUTIFUL HOLM LEA OPENED TO PUBLIC

Professor C. S. Sargent has announced that his Brookline estate, Holm Lea, will be open to the public to-morrow afternoon and all day Sunday. In order to be allowed the privileges of the grounds Professor Sargent states that all visitors must come on foot.

People interested in landscape gardening and horticulture generally will find much of interest about the estate during the day and a half that it is open for inspection.

GIVES $10,000 TO ASSIST PRISONERS

The will of Benjamin Cutler Clark of Cohasset, father of Ex-Alderman Ellery H. Clark of this city has been allowed by the Norfolk Probate Court at Dedham. There is a bequest of $10,000 to be held in trust by Ralph B. Williams, a nephew, for the benefit of some charitable purpose, preferably for assisting persons in prison for crime.

SISTERS IN NEW CONVENT.

The fifty sisters of the parochial school in connection with the Church of SS. Peter and Paul to-day moved into the $30,000 convent just blessed by Right Rev. Bishop Brady. The structure, which is at Nos. 46-48 Broadway, South Boston, was begun in November and contains forty rooms.

CUMMINS HITS WOOL TARIFF

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The woolen schedule was taken up to-day in the Senate and Senator Cummins of Iowa gave notice that if the Lafollette amendment reducing duties on woolen fabrics is defeated he will move to recommit the woolen schedule to the committee.

He would endeavor to have the Senate instruct the committee to leave the duties on unmanufacutred woolens unchanged and to fix compensatory duties on manufactured woolens, which would represent the difference between the cost of wool to the American and the foreign manufacturers and the difference in the cost of labor.

Discussing the bill generally Senator Cummins declared that it is idle to say that a protective tariff added one farthing to the price which the farmer received for his product because the farmers annually export more than $800,000,000 worth of products, and not one tithe is added to their value by the tariff.

Senator Cummins created a mild sensation by declaring the excessive rates on the woollen and other schedules which the Republican leaders were trying to force through would bring the Republican party into unmeasured ridicule and censure, and threaten the destruction of its policy and the disruption of its organisation.

WOMAN'S HEART IS BURST BY SINGING

The reopening of an old wound of her heart, which was caused by her overstraining herself while singing a year ago, caused the death of Miss Emma Gregory, a noted Italian opera singer at the City Hospital. Just when she was gaining fame as a singer Miss Gregory injured her heart and was forced to go to Europe for treatment. After returning she was gradually taking up her old work, when she was fatally stricken.

THREE MONTHS FOR ROBBING A WOMAN

Charged with stealing a box from the Carney Hospital containing a bankbook, money orders and $15, Dennis McGrath, twenty years old, of No. 23 Dorchester street, South Boston, appeared before Judge Fallon to-day. He was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. He appealed and was held in $300 bail for the Superior Court. The property was owned by Miss Lulu Donovan.

FOUR AUTOISTS FINED.

In the Roxbury District Court to-day four automobile owners were fined $20 each for overspeeding. They were Elliot S. Church, No. 470 Centre street, Newton; James E. Galligan, No. 6 Prescott street, Brookline; Alfred V. Kidd, No. 45 Sagamore street, Dorchester; Edward R. Sherburne, No. 37 Monument street, West Medford.

FAMILY CURED OF SKIN TROUBLES

Two Little Girls had Eczema Very Badly—In One Case Child's Hair Came Out and Left Bare Patches—Father's Head Sore from Childhood—In All Three Cases

CUTICURA MET WITH ITS USUAL SUCCESS

"I have two little girls who have been troubled very badly with eczema. One of them had it on her lower limbs. I did everything that I could hear of for her, but it did not give in until warm weather when it seemingly subsided. The next winter when it became cold weather the eczema started again and also in her head where it would take the hair out and leave bare patches as large as a quarter of a dollar. At the same time her arms were sore the whole length of them. I took her to a physician and he said that she had two distinct types of eczema. I continued with him for several weeks and the child grew worse all of the time. Her sister's arms were also affected in the same way. My husband came home one day with a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. I began using them and also the Cuticura Pills and by the time the second lot was used their skin was soft and smooth as it had not been before for the winter. We keep the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment constantly by us and when any little roughness or irritation appears on their skin I quickly dispel it with the Cuticura Remedies. My husband has used them with most satisfactory results for a sore head which has troubled him from childhood. Mrs. Charles Baker, Albion, Me., Sept. 21, 1908."

Cuticura Ointment is one of the most successful remedies for torturing, disfiguring humors of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, of infants, children and adults, ever compounded, in proof of which a single anointing with it, preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed by mild doses of Cuticura Pills, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly humors, eczemas, irritations and inflammations, permit rest and sleep and point to a speedy cure when all else fails.

Cuticura Soap (25c.), Ointment (50c.), Resolvent (50c.), and Chocolate Coated Pills (25c.), are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., 137 Columbus Ave., Boston. Mailed Free, Cuticura Book on Skin Diseases.

FIREMEN WILL UNVEIL SHAFT

The Misses Margaret and Josephine McLean, daughters of Captain Walter McLean of Engine No. 46 will unveil the monument to dead Boston firemen in Forest Hills Cemetery Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. There will be simple exercises in charge of the committee, which includes Captain McLean, Edward A. Bennett, General Charles H. Taylor, Samuel Abbott and George P. Field.

The funds for the monument have been subscribed by firemen and their friends. The monument is twenty-six feet high, with a twelve-foot base. A statue in bronze of a fireman surmounts the pedestal, which is of Quincy granite. John A. Wilson of Boston was the sculptor.

Delegations will be present at the unveiling from all the companies of the Boston fire department, and the veteran firemen's organisations will also be represented.

WILL FORCE WATER PLAN

Despite the objections of the Merchants' Association, Mayor Hibbard will probably go ahead with his plans for installing a high pressure water system for better fire protection for the city. City Engineer Jackson and Fire Commissioner Parker are preparing to present a request to the chief executive on his return from Buffalo that he spend at least $150,000 to start the work.

The Mayor submitted a bill to the Legislature which, if passed, will make it mandatory upon future Mayors to continue the installation of the system which Mayor Hibbard proposes to start. The entire system, when completed, will cost over $1,000,000. The Merchants Association appeared at the State House yesterday to oppose the bill.

A MAGAZINE OF CHOICE FICTION—Whole pages of enthralling stories, superbly illustrated, appear in the Literary Section of the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

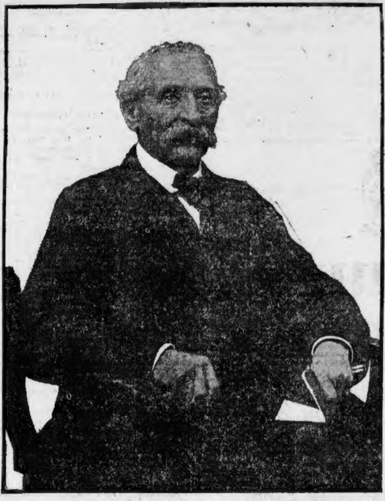
DEATH FIGHT OVER SULTA

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 11.—News of a desperate but unsuccessful attempt to rescue Abdul Hamid, the deposed Sultan, from his guards at Salonica was received here to-day. The attempt was made by reactionaries, but their plan had been betrayed to the Young Turks, the Salonika advices say, and many of the assaulting party were killed.

The dispatches say the attack was made about midnight and that a conflict was waged for several hours, the defenders being victorious but losing several officers.

Abdul Hamid has been confined in a villa at Salonica with eleven of the members of his harem since his removal from Constantinople immediately after his deposition. From the first the young Turk Government has feared that attempts to free him and place him at the head of an uprising against the new order would be made by the reactionaries and a considerable force of troops has been kept in readiness to instantly reinforce the guard.

Famous Pedestrian Praises The Strength-Giver



Mr. George H. Ward, the aged noted pedestrian of Middletown, Conn., who is vigorous both mentally and physically, says that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the best in the market as a tonic and strength builder. Mr. Ward, although over 70 years old, every day during the summer walks from ten to twenty miles and is as fresh at the finish as he was at the start. He has often challenged any man in the state to walk 1,000 miles or more.

"I am over 70 and am still as vigorous and active as twenty years ago. I walk during the summer from 10 to 30 miles a day without much fatigue. Recently I walked 31 miles and finished feeling as fresh as when I started. I have challenged, without success, any man in the State to walk a thousand miles or more.

"I have used for many years Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to keep myself in condition, and I know that it is one of the best, if not the best, medicinal whiskey on the market for a tonic and body-builder. George H. Ward, Middletown, Conn."

Mr. Ward's case is similar to that of many other aged men and women, who have been kept hale, hearty and vigorous by the constant use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a medicine. It is a food requiring no digestion, which has a stimulating and tonic effect upon the system.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

as a tonic builder and stimulant is one of the greatest strength-givers known to science. It aids in destroying disease and by its building and healing properties assists in restoring tissues in a gradual, healthy, natural manner. It is a wonderful remedy in the treatment and cure of consumption, pneumonia, grippe, bronchitis, coughs, colds, malaria, low-fevers, stomach troubles and all wasting, weakened conditions, if taken in time.

CAUTION—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Price $1.00. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Write Medical Department, The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y., for a free illustrated medical booklet and free advice.

EORGIA GIRL ELOPES WITH CZAR'S COUSIN

NEW YORK, June 11.—"My curse is upon you, and it comes from a bleeding heart."

Scrawled by a frantic man this note was handed to Miss Florence Allen of Detroit to-day when she walked down the gangplank of the Cunard liner Mauretania.

It was written by J. Wright Hunt of Atlanta, Ga., aged millionaire hotel owner, with interests in many States, whose wife eloped in Paris with Alexandre Tcherdiadoff, third cousin to the Czar of Russia.

"I will kill myself," cried Miss Allen as she read the curse.

This dramatic climax to a romance of two continents ends the affair, declared Hunt. "I will not sue for divorce," he said after the liner had docked. "I am through with the whole affair. I made my will in Paris—my wife will not get a cent. I am sorry for her parents, who live in Detroit, but for her I have no pity.

"I would not forgive her if she came to me and begged forgiveness on her knees. I am absolutely through with her. One word from Miss Allen would have stopped it all—would have saved my life from ruin and my wife's name. But this woman, though she knew every detail of the love affair, said nothing, actually helping in their flight."

"The Russian was captivated by Mrs. Hunt's voice," said the husband. He was in a telephone booth adjoining the one she was using. Suddenly he pushed in to where she was, threw himself on his knees before her. From that time on but one person in the American colony of Paris knew anything of the affair between the tall, handsome Russian and the beautiful American. That man was Hunt. On June 1 while Hunt and his wife were at dinner she complained of feeling ill and retired.

When the husband followed later she was gone. Pinned to her pillow was a letter.

BOSTON FIREMEN DON THEIR NEW SUMMER HATS

Chief Mullen in his Summer headgear.

Beginning next Tuesday all officers of the Boston Fire Department from Chief Mullen down, will wear a new style hat—a brand new kind of hat. The top half of the hat is made of celluloid duck and the bottom part is of blue cloth. There are two gold buttons and gold braid with the regulation insignia of the department on them.

BUFFALO BILL DRAGGED INTO GOULD CASE AGAIN BY DEFENDANT LAWYER

A.—About four head, that had been bought for me with my money.

Q.—You said Mr. Gould did not pay your bill at the St. Regis? A.—I said I didn't know who paid it.

Mr. Gould Paid Bill.

Here Mr. Nicoll read from Mrs. Gould's complaint a statement that Mr. Gould had paid the bill.

Q.—Was that statement true? A.—I didn't see him pay it.

Q.—What is your age, Mrs. Gould?

Mr. Shearn objected and was sustained by the courteous justice.

Q.—Where were you born? (Objection again sustained.)

"Nothing is admissible," said Justice Dowling, "except what relates to the issue or to test the credibility of the witness."

Q.—Under what name were you known before your marriage? A.—Under the name my father gave me, Viola Katherine Clemmons.

Q.—Weren't you known also as Dayton? A.—Yes, Dayon was the name of my stepfather. I was for a while known by that name, but when I decided to go on the stage my stepfather, who was a very celebrated minister, objected to my using his name on the stage.

Q.—Do you know Mr. Woodward? A.—I was introduced to him by Helen Maher on a steamer going to Europe.

Q.—Did you and Miss Maher go to London together with Mr. Woodward? A.—We did not. The only time I saw or spoke to him was on the ship.

Q.—Did you ever travel with the Wild West Show? A.—I traveled about as the guest of Miss Arta Cody.

Q.—Miss Arta Cody left her father; did you continue to travel with the Wild West Show after she left?

Mr. Shearn objected, but was overruled.

Mrs. Gould asked: "What do you mean by traveling with the Wild West Show?

"I mean," said Mr. Nicoll, "whether you went from place to place with the Wild West show?"

"I did not travel with the Wild West show."

Questions About Buffalo Bill.

Q.—Are you splitting hairs? Who was the proprietor of the Wild West show? A.—Mr. Cody and Mr. Sallsbury.

Q.—Did you travel with them? A.—Mr. Cody was my manager.

Q.—When did you begin to travel with Mr. Cody? A.—I never traveled with him nor with the show.

Q.—Did you travel with Mr. Cody from place to place with the show?

Mr. Shearn objected: "This line of questioning is opposed to precedent, besides it simply shocks one sense of justice to think that a husband comes into court and simply to keep from his payment of alimony seeks to besmirch the character of his wife and reflect upon and degrade her. He goes back twenty years to pick up witnesses and assail her.

The objection was overruled.

"Mr. Cody was my manager and I frequently visited him to consult on business," said Mrs. Gould.

"Please answer my question."

"That was a fair answer," said Justice Dowling.

Switch to Castle Gould.

Mr. Nicoll then switched to Castle Gould days and to Molloy, the superintendent there, accused by Mrs. Gould of having persecuted her in her husband's behalf.

Q.—Where did you first become acquainted with Molloy? A.—When Mr. Gould introduced him in 1906.

Q.—Didn't Mrs. Ladenburg introduce him to you? A.—No. I knew that Mrs. Ladenburg had sent for him for Mr. Gould.

Q.—Where did you first see him? A.—At the St. Regis.

Mrs. Gould said she was not informed what the powers of Molloy were to be when he was engaged.

"Had I know," she said, "I should have made violent objection."

She said that when she went abroad in 1906, Molloy and Mr. Sells and his nephew were in the party, Molloy leaving at either Plymouth or Southampton.

Q.—Did you see Molloy at all between the time when you saw him at the Castle Gould and when you told Mr. Gould that he blew smoke into your face? A.—I saw him frequently flitting about the place.

A Busy Little Flitter.

Q.—He flitted A.—Yes. He was a very busy little flitter.

Q.—Did he ever flit near you? A.—Never, except once. He tried to flit once.

Q.—Is that how you spell it? Mrs. Gould made no reply.

Q.—You're sure he blew smoke into your face? A.—Yes, cigarette smoke.

Q.—Do you object to men smoking? A.—No. Mr. Gould smoked all about the house.

Mr. Nicoll asked Mrs. Gould whether she classed Mr. Molloy as a servant.

"He was worse than a servant," was her reply.

Q.—He was your guest at dinner? A.—No, he was Mr. Gould's guest at dinner.

Q.—His salary was what? A.—I don't know.

"It was $10,000," said Mr. Shearn, adding, with a scornful look at Mr. Gould, "just about half the amount of the alimony."

"Dear Mr. Molloy."

Mr. Nicoll now came to July 16, 1906, the day when Mr. Gould, according to his wife, deserted her. He showed a letter dated July 26, 1903. It was in Mrs. Gould's hand and ran as follows:

> "My dear Mr. Molloy—My secretary's mother is so ill that he is obliged to be away and Mr. Hyman will take his place. Will you kindly show him around. Yours truly,
>
> "KATHERINE GOULD."

Q.—Is this "Dear Mr. Molloy" the same one who blew cigarette smoke into your face and throttled your butler? A.—I think I should be permitted to explain.

Q.—You'll have ample opportunity to do that when Mr. Shearn asks you to do so.

In reply to a question Mrs. Gould said she tok luncheon with Dustin Farnum in the restaurant of his hotel at Hartford, Ct.

Q.—Where was it that the automobile in which that you and Mr. Dustin Farnum were in collision with a truck or a phaeton? A.—I don't know what it was. It was some kind of a vehicle.

Q.—Well, where was it? A.—On the way to Castle Gould. In the road between here and Jamaica there was a dark place.

It Was a Dark Day.

Q.—A dark place? Was it night? A.—No, it was dark day.

Q.—Was it near a roadhouse? A.—No, near a tree-shaded bank.

Q.—Well, you stopped at a roadhouse and tok supper with Mr. Farnum? A.—No, all I took was a sandwich.

Q.—Was this after the collision? A.—No, before.

Q.—Who suggested stopping at the roadhouse? A.—I said I wanted to stop there as I was hungry.

Q.—Was the place known as the Lakeville Inn? A.—No, nowhere near that.

Q.—You tok no lunch at Castle Gould? A.—No.

Farnum Takes a Sandwich.

Q.—You preferred to take lunch at the roadhouse? A.—I preferred to take a sandwich there. I was not hungry at Castle Gould.

Q.—How long were you at the Inn? A.—About fifteen minutes.

Q.—Did Farnum take any nourishment there? A.—I think he took a sandwich.

Q.—Anyone drink anything there? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—Did You? A.—I don't recall.

Q.—What time did you get back to New York? A.—About 10:30.

Q.—Mr. Farnum go with you? A.—Yes.

Q.—To your apartment? A.—Yes, just for a few moments and then he went back to his apartments.

Trip to Philadelphia.

(The iternary next took Mrs. Gould with Mr. Farnum to Philadelphia, where each had apartments at the Bellevue Stratford, then back to New York.

Q.—Where were you between October 16, 1906, and October 26, 1906? A.—I don't know.

"I know," said Mr. Shearn.

"Well, I do too," said Mr. Nicoll, "but I want Mrs. Gould to tell."

"If you both know," exclaimed Mrs. Gould, with a pleasant chuckle, "why do you annoy me with such a foolish question?"

Mr. Nicoll insisted upon an answer, and Mrs. Gould said that on November 18, 19 and 20, 1906, she and Dustin Farnum were stopping at the Carroll house, Lynchburg, Va.

SLAYER OF 5, DAZED, PLEADS "NOT GUILTY"

John Murphy, the maniac hog header of the Somerville packing house, who stabbed five men to death and seriously injured three more last Saturday, was arraigned in the Superior Criminal Court before Judge Frederick Lawton to-day in East Cambridge. He was charged with murder in five counts, pleaded not guilty and was held without bail.

Judge Lawton appointed Drs. Philip Coombs Knapp and Henry C. Baldwin, insanity experts, to make an examination of Murphy. After Murphy had been taken back to his cell, his wife and daughter, Margaret, and Attorney O'Neill talked to him. He then appeared rational and remarked to his wife:

"Have I done anything to you? What am I here for? I am well and strong and I want to get out and work for you and the children.

"I want to see John and James. I want to see Father Hugh Cleary of St. Joseph's Church.

John and James are his sons, aged respectively twelve and fourteen. James graduates from the grammar school this month. As Mrs. Murphy and their daughter were about to leave, Murphy exclaimed:

"I am going to be sent away where I will never see you again."

Murphy kissed both his wife and daughter good-by. They were much affected. The alienists begin the study of Murphy at once.

Among the sixty-nine indictments brought in by the June session of the Middlesex County Grand Jury to-day, was one charging Murphy with murder in the first degree in five counts.

Clerk Ambrose read the indictment to him, but he gazed vacantly about without apparently in the least comprehending what it was. Lawyer John H. O'Neill asked Murphy to stand up, and told him what to say when it came time for him to plead, and he said, weakly: "Not guilty."

POLICE FIND GIRL FIGURING IN MOTIVE OF NEW YORK CRIME

NEW YORK, June 11.—The jealousy of a rival suitor for the hand of Miss Jennie Siegel, a pretty girl of No. 5 Sheriff street, was the motive behind the savage murder of the young man whose dismembered body was found in front of the public school at Henry and Oliver streets.

This was established to-day when a number of new facts were disclosed, partly lifting the mystery surrounding the crime. Quickly following the discovery of the dismembered body in two bundles, but without the head, the identity of the murdered man was established, and then the police found the head, wrapped in another bundle, beneath the shadow of the Brooklyn bridge at Rose and Vandewater streets.

The murdered man was Samuel Bersen, twenty-two years old, living at No. 221 East Ninety-eighth street, with the family of Morris Kornbloom. The dismembered portions of the body were identified by the man's sister, Mrs. Esther Isaacson, No. 180 East One Hundred and First street.

It was from Mrs. Isaacson and from Mrs. Anna Binder, a sister of the Siegel girl, that reporters to-day learned the facts which led to the discovery of a motive for the murder. According to both women Bersen had been thrown over by the girl, who has since been paid much attention by another young man. Miss Siegel, according to his sister, met Bersen a year and a half ago. The two became greatly attached to each other, and Bersen called more and more frequently at her home. They were generally believed to be engaged to be married when about four weeks ago they had a quarrel.

"My sister," said Mrs. Binder, "did not like the associates that Bersen had taken up with. She told him so and they had many warm words over the matter. Bersen had a violent temper, and this led to the quarrel between them.

"Bersen was of too jealous a disposition also. This was one of the things that my sister complained of. She told him plainly that he would have to change considerably before she would marry him. After he left the house following that talk with her about four weeks ago, he did not come back."

Both Kornbloom and Mrs. Isaacson said to-day that Berson consulted a fortune teller on Tuesday last, the day before he is supposed to have been murdered. He came home last Tuesday evening and said that he had an important engagement the next morning. He asked to be awakened at 5 a. m., and left the house an hour after that time.

When he left he had two diamond rings on his fingers, a gold watch and chain, a diamond watch charm and $20 in money. None of these was found on the body when it was unwrapped at the police station.

Waldberg Special Brew

Waldberg Special Brew

The Waldberg Idea

¶ Funny what a lot of Boston Liquor Dealers serve cheap lager beer over their bars—and they are encouraged by a good many Brewers in this, too.

¶ A number of level-headed dealers believed thoroughly in our idea, that by giving their customers a Special Brew of lager, they could largely increase their business. They were enthusiastic, they gave us positive instructions to produce the finest lager in the world, sparing no expense to get the desired result.

¶ Today they have this Special Brew, and the product surpasses their highest expectations. Imagine, if possible, a rich, full-bodied beer, neither too light nor too heavy, but "just right," aged four months in the old fashioned, but unequaled, method in vogue among the German peasantry.

¶ There is used in the brewing of this beer real Bohemian hops, costing forty-five cents a pound. Domestic hops, used in practically all of the beer you are familiar with, cost in the neighborhood of ten cents a pound. The malt used in Special Brew bears the same degree of excellence as the hops used compared with the ordinary beer.

¶ Special Brew costs the tapster just fifty per cent. more than ordinary beer.

¶ These dealers have determined to relinquish some of their profits by giving their customers a glass of beer they could be proud to serve for the money.

¶ It pays in the long run to be "on the square." Ask for and the delights of the old German beer gardens will be yours in America.

Waldberg Special Brew

Mitchell the Tailor's $1000 Challenge to Miss Vesta Tilley

The World's Most Famous Male Impersonator Now Playing at Keith's Theatre

I spent a few enjoyable moments at Keith's yesterday afternoon watching this clever little lady, and believe me, she does a pretty piece of work. I understand that Miss Tilley makes the assertion that she cannot be fitted by an American tailor and that she must have all her male attire made by English tailors. She says that we American tailors "won't do," don't you know. I disagree with Miss Tilley—hence my $1000 challenge—and submit this proposition to the young lady and her representatives:—

I will take Vesta Tilley's order for one of my $10 Prince Albert suits (made from the cloth secured in my recent purchase of the Baer stock—the high-class Devonshire street tailor, suits from which I am now selling to my regular customers at the same $10 price). I will fashion this suit in the usual Mitchell American style from measurement to delivery, and I assert that this suit will be the best in her already famous wardrobe in points of fit, style and fabric. I will take the judgment on this from the newspaper men covering the theatres, or from a committee of Miss Tilley's own selection, or from the Keith audience. The $1000 is Miss Tilley's if the decision goes against me.

There are no strings to this challenge. I only stipulate that I may be allowed to exhibit this suit in my Washington street window for two days before Vesta Tilley wears it upon Keith's stage and that Miss Tilley will ALWAYS give me credit for making it.

I want to correct one impression that she has of American tailors—the padded American shoulder that she speaks of, has, with classy tailors, been a thing of the past in this country for years.

The Mitchell concave shoulder does not mean a pile of wadding to produce an exaggerated effect like a burlesque of a college athlete. On the contrary, the Mitchell shoulder would only pronounce the naturally beautiful shoulder lines of Miss Tilley (A CRITICISM—KINDLY LOOK AT THE SHOULDER EFFECT ON HER ENGLISH COAT). In general work and fit (as the English see it) I think Miss Tilley's English coats are excellent, but the shape of the lapel and the width of the collar produce a disproportionate effect, and to the American eye looks not pleasingly odd.

In a friendly, helpful spirit I suggest that Miss Tilley, when showing in America, wear American style men's clothes, since, while her male apparel may be at the top of the mode in London, to the average American audience the smart American lines are missing. Try Mitchell, Miss Tilley.

All uncalled for Suits, irrespective of their price $5

All of Baer's stock. His woolens were selected for the business element of Devonshire street and intended to sell at $25, $30, $35. My Price $10

JOHNSON OFFERS TO FIGHT KAUFMAN 45-ROUND MILL

BAD ROADS IN KANSAS DELAY AUTO RACERS

By J. C. KERRISON.

The competitors in the ocean to ocean race experienced three inches of rainfall and miserable condition of roads in the run from Topeka to Oakley, Kans., yesterday. The heavy going kept the pace down to ten miles an hour, washouts being frequent and the streams particularly high.

Scott, the driver of the Ford car which took a skid into a twenty-foot ditch the previous day, stopped at Topeka something like four hours to make repairs and then by daredevil driving regained considerable of his lost distance.

In the meanwhile the Shawmut, the Kulick Ford and the Acme pushed along as best they could, the cars hanging pretty well together until the Acme had axle trouble just outside Grinnell.

This left Pettingill with the Shawmut and Kulick in the Ford to the fore and they pushed along at as fast a pace as possible, reaching Oakley at 8:45, being in company with each other. The second Ford reached Oakley at 11:45 and without loss of time, despite their somewhat exhausted physical condition, the crews left for Denver, which they expect to reach by noon to-day.

The contest is decidedly close and interesting and is attracting no end of attention along the route.

What Are Misfits?

Misfits is the title given by the tailors many years ago to all garments left on their hands. But many of the uncalled-for merchant tailors' garments we offer are not mistakes in fit, but were refused for other reasons. At $15, $18, $20, $25 to $35, you can pick from over 3000 Sack Suits, Coats and Trousers, Prince Alberts and Full Dress and Tuxedo Suits, which were custom made for $40, $45, $50, $60, $75 up to $100.

What Are George's Model Garments

$12 $15 $18

As the busy seasons with the high class tailors average 13 weeks in every 26, their skilled cutters, designers and journeymen have much idle time, as they will not work in sweat shops. Realizing this condition, we have been utilizing at very moderate figures these skilled workers during the weeks when they would otherwise be idle. In the construction of GEORGE'S MODEL GARMENTS the same skill and detail that marks the work of the famous 5th ave., N. Y., tailors is employed. Thus our GEORGE'S MODEL GARMENTS at $12, $15 and $18 are double the values of factory-made clothing at the same prices.

Sample Values Out of Both Depts.

	George's Price
Sack Suit, of dark blue worsted, fancy weave, one of George's Model Garments. Distinctive from ready made. The equal of any $35 custom made suit. Conservative 3-button sack. Our price..................	$12
Coat and Trousers of genuine Irish homespun, half silk lined, natural sloping shoulders. Elegantly tailored. Custom made by Geo. H. Lawrence, one of New York's Broadway leading tailors, for $45. Our price..............	$15
Sack Suit of very dark gray worsted, will fit a stout man, size 42-44. Made by Peterson of Philadelphia for $60. Half alpaca lined, very neat and will appeal to the man of quiet taste. If it fits you, our price..........	$20

We can fit the thin, short, stout, extra size, as well as the man of regular proportion. Over 4000 garments to select from, including the famous Manchester English raincoat, at $15, $18, $20. If alterations are necessary the garments are adapted to your figure by our master tailor free of cost to you.

UNCLE CY YOUNG, HALE, HEARTY AND MODEST AS EVER, TALKS BASEBALL

Veteran Pitcher Praises Charlie Wagner, the Red Sox Shortstop.

Cy Young, the "grand old man of baseball," is in town. The veteran pitcher who won so many games for the Boston Americans now wears a Cleveland uniform, but his place in the hearts of the Boston fans is just as warm as it ever was.

Uncle Cy was seated in the lobby of the Copley Square Hotel calmly smoking a pipe to-day when a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN shook hands with him.

"How does the old town look, Cy?"

"Great," replied the veteran, "I'm glad to be back again for a few days."

Just then another reporter approached and asked how he liked the change from Boston to Cleveland.

"You'll have to see Lajoie about that," replied Cy. "I have nothing to say." When the reporter retired the veteran remarked: "I never like to give an interview. This shift of mine from Boston to Cleveland is something I have never talked about to anyone."

It is a fact that Young thoroughly dislikes to talk about himself. When he pitched that remarkable game for the Bostons against the Athletics several years ago in which not a Philadelphia player saw first base, the old fellow was besieged for signed statements, interviews and special magazine articles. He referred everybody to Jimmy Collins, then manager of the team. Not a word could anyone get out of the old fellow.

But Uncle Cy will talk baseball with reporters if you agree to leave him out of it. For example he said to-day:

"What's the matter with Wagner, your short stop?

The injury to "Heinie" was explained to him.

"Now there's a good ball player," declared Old Cy. "I don't know as I ever saw a better man in his position. His absence from the team must make a great difference to the Red Sox, although I am glad to see my old friends are going along nicely. Wagner is the best man to put the ball on a runner I ever saw. Ferris is an excellent man at that game, but Wagner can use one hand better than Hobe.

"Our team didn't get started right. Luck was against us. Every time one of our men booted a ball it cost a run. Every time our pitcher walked a man he scored. The other fellows might make more errors than we did, but the misplays didn't cost anything. Lately we have been going along very well."

"Are you going to pitch to-day, Cy?"

"I am inclined to think so, but Larry hasn't said anything to me about it."

Uncle Cy looks the same as ever. He is forty-two years old and has been pitching ball in major league company for twenty years.

"We have only played four games on the trip," continued the veteran. "Two games were postponed in Philadelphia and two in Washington. I hear the Red Sox have been drawing fine crowds. Well, Boston is a great ball town—there's no mistake about that."

The reporter said "so long" to Cy and hunted up Lajoie to ask if Young would pitch to-day, and being answered in the affirmative, started for the door.

"Say," said Young, "did Larry tell you that I was to pitch?"

"Yes."

"Well, I guess I better shave up and brush my hair," remarked the old fellow with a sly wink.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

McIlveen, last year with Newark, and thus far this season with the New York Americans, reported to the Bisons.

* * *

Collins, the new Buffalo right fielder, played in Rochester for a time under George Smith, when he was having the unpleasant task of getting in wrong.

* * *

Obituary scribblers who have been working overtime on Willie Keeler of late are on the wrong track. Wee Willie will never be a candidate for the old men's home or the diamond tomb.

* * *

Joe Ward's sale to the Phillies was a welcome bit of news for the player. Joe has been wanting to cut loose for some time, and nothing pleases him better than to play in his native city.

* * *

The acquisition of Wallace Clement, of the Phillies, to the Brooklyn outfield will strengthen the Superbas. Clement is a finished fielder, a good hitter and speedy on the bases.

* * *

Clark Griffith is doing great things for Cincinnati. The Reds appear to have a cinch on fourth place, and but eight points separate them from the Giants and third place.

* * *

Pitcher Berger, who was ready to walk the plank a few weeks ago, won another game for the Naps, which makes him sure of at least a couple of more salary envelopes.

* * *

Kid Gleason is slated to succeed Eugene McGann as manager of the Jersey City Club. The recent slump of the Skeeters led Bob Davis, the wonder of the club, to appeal to Billy Murray, of the Philadelphia Nationals, for help. Murray, it is reported, has consented to hand over the veteran for the job.

45 ROUNDS OR FINISH WILL DO

"I am willing to go forty-five rounds or fight to a finish with Kaufman in Nevada before October 12, but I will not fight in California before then," declared Champion Jack Johnson to an AMERICAN reporter today.

"I have told Coffroth many times my reason for not fighting a forty-five-round battle with Kaufman. I am already signed up with Ketchel for a twenty-round bout on October 12 in San Francisco.

Coffroth wants me to fight a forty-five-round battle between now and the date set for the Ketchel fight in the same place. There is no reason why I should fight a forty-five-round battle before the Ketchel fight.

"I'm glad Ketchel defeated O'Brien. I hope he beats them all up to the time he meets me."

ONLY 43 POSTPONEMENTS.

There have been forty-three postponements in the American League so far this season, and the National is not far behind it, having a total of forty.

A few of these postponements have been played off, but not many, and there are enough postponed games to be played off to insure a superabundance of double-headers for some time.

This is going to bother the clubs that are crippled or which are not carrying plenty of substitutes. It is also likely to greatly benefit the aggregations that are booming smoothly along in front.

PACER GOES IN 2:06¼.

Ed. Geers has worked many of his horses in from 2:10½ to 2:16, the pacers going miles in from 2:06¼ to 2:12. Walter W. 2:15¼, paced a mile in 2:06¼, which is the fastest work reported so far this season. Anvil, the two-year-old colt by St. Vallent Vincent 2:11¾, owned by F. G. Jones, has trotted a mile in 2:22½, and in a 2:30 mile, his last workout, stepped the last half in 1:07¼.

Results of Boxing Bouts

NEW YORK, June 11.—Philly McGovern and Charley Goldman, local bantamweights, fought a fast ten-round bout before the East Avenue Athletic Club of Long Island City. Honors were about even in the first three rounds, but in the fourth Goldman weakened, and the next four rounds were McGovern's by a safe margin. Goldman recovered somewhat in the ninth and both men put up a slashing finish. Both spent the last round trying for a knockout.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—Teddy Maloney had the better of Nathan Ehrlich at the Broadway A. C., but spoiled his better work by foul tactics in two rounds. Maloney hit rather low and was warned by the referee. In the first part of the bout Maloney showed a good deal of cleverness. Ehrlich fought back hard, and for a while it was a pretty contest, until Maloney did some foul fighting.

"Jig" Stone and "Dutch" Carr, two Charlestown rivals, boxed four fast rounds in Mishawum Hall, Charlestown, the headquarters of the Mishawum Club, in which the former clearly demonstrated his superiority. In every round "Jig" outclassed Carr, the second round of the bout being the only one in which Carr, for a minute, had Stone bewildered.

MONTREAL, June 11.—In the fifth round Frank Carroll knocked Billy Weller of Montreal through the ropes and off the stage. Carroll was awarded the decision, although some of the fans were at first inclined to dispute it.

TOUTED FOR THE STAKES.

A successor in prospect to Locust Jack (2:06½) and Locust Boy (2:13¼), that were bought green and developed to fame by the Locust Hill Farm, of Walden, N. Y., is the mare Locust Lass, that the farm is entering in the large-sized early closing events in the Pennsylvania and New York half-mile track circuits.

MULLIN IS AFTER BIG BOX RECORD

This week's average column shows George Mullin still in the lead. There is no one near him. Mullin stands a fine chance of beating them all to it if he does not get a slump when the temperature takes a rise.

George has pitched in twelve games this year. He has won eleven and victory for the other contest in which he appeared goes to George Speer. The little southpaw pitched nine and two-thirds innings in St. Louis and then Mullin pitched to the last man to face the Tigers in that 10-inning three to one victory.

James McCormick, as a twirler for the Chicago team, established the record for consecutive games won in 1886, when he pitched his team to 24 successive victories.

Charles Radbourne, doing box duty for Providence in 1883, pitched 37 consecutive games and won 28 of them.

Radbourne also holds the record for pitching the greatest number of games in one season. He twirled 72 in 1884.

GOLF GOSSIP NEWS OF THE LINKS

Individual honors certainly belong to the Boston women golfers who have been taking part in the Eastern Women's Golf Association meeting at Baltusrol. To begin with, Miss Harley won the driving competition, with Miss Adams second. Then Miss Adams captured the championship title, while three other Boston women figured in the handicap medal play.

The fact that only three women were eligible for the Eastern Women's title after the first day is to be deplored. The fact that women from two outside golfing districts had made the trip to take part in the meeting should have been cause enough to call a meeting if necessary, and change their program to fit the situation at hand. The idea of letting those who had a score within twelve strokes of the leader continue in the second round, is a good one, provided that some fine day a player is not twelve strokes better than any one else, and will practically have the title after only one round has been played. This is a most improbable outcome to look forward to, but the result this year shows that it might occur.

The team matches that start at all the Western clubs on June 17th for the Tom Morris Memorial Cup will attract some of the best players in the Western Golf Association. This trophy to perpetuate the memory of one of the greatest as well as grandest golfers on the other side of the water will be played for annually on the above date, which was the birthday of the deceased.

JEFFRIES MAY REFEREE KETCHEL-JOHNSON FIGHT

NEW YORK, June 11.—It is not improbable that America will see the three central figures of the heavyweight division in one ring at the same time before many months have passed.

Willus Britt, the hustling little manager of Middleweight Champion Stanley Ketchel, has announced that he would like nothing better than Jim Jeffries to referee the twenty-round bout between his protege and Champion Jack Johnson.

As the fight is not to be held until September and no one has yet been selected to officiate, there is a great possibility of Big Jeff being the third man in the ring in the coming battle for the heavyweight crown.

The boilermaker is a prime favorite on the Coast and now that Ketchell is willing, even eager, for his selection, the only possible objection could come from Johnson. The negro might not care to object, however, in face of Jeff's popularity among the native sons.

Britt and Ketchell were prompted to advance the name of the retired champion as the result of Jeff's decision to meet the winner of the Ketchel-Johnson bout, regardless of the result. Jeffries has just declared that he would only meet Johnson in case the latter defeated Ketchel. On the other hand, if the Michigan whirlwind disposes of the negro, the the Wolverine will have to look to his laurels.

Now that Jeff has put in so many arduous months getting into trim to regain the crown he passed up, he purposes to again establish himself as chief of the brigade.

If Jeffries is sincere in his declaration it means a speedy settlement for all time of the puzzling heavyweight situation.

NOTRE DAME AFTER GAME.

That clever southpaw, Leo Callahan of Commercial High and Alonzo White, who have been working out with the Red Sox in morning backstop practice, will now do most of the battery work for the crack Notre Dame A. C. of Roxbury. The Notre Dame team want some fast club for Bunker Hill Day at home or away. Manager Martin Broderick, No. 33 Fulda street, Roxbury.

JOHNSON AT COLUMBIA.

Jack Johnson's first professional engagement in this city is scheduled for Monday, when he appears at the Columbia Theatre in a sketch entitled "Training for a Title." The colored pugilist will show how he defeated Burns, and tell of the different blows which put the Canadian to the bad.

SEMI-PRO GAME WANTED.

The Gate of Heaven Holy Name Club desires a game away from home for to-morrow, June 12, with a strong team paying reasonable guarantee. Would like to hear from Valladolid Council, K. of C., of Lynn. Telephone South Boston 21044, between 7 and 8 p. m.

MAX BAKER AFTER BOUTS.

Married Flirts Shatter Single Men's Ideals

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

NOT long since a bachelor complained to me of the monotony of life, and I took it upon myself to chide him for not becoming a benedict and establishing a home.

The bachelor turned upon me with smouldering fury in his voice and eyes. "When the institution of marriage is reformed, when the word no longer suggests merely a cloak for the grossest immoralities and the most wretched conditions of life, I may think of marrying," he said; "not before."

"You are taking a pessimistic view of the situation," I answered. "You must not judge marriage by the reports from the divorce courts, or the latest sensation or column of the daily press.

"Remember that the voice of happiness is so quiet that it is rarely heard beyond its own hearthstone, while unhappiness goes shouting its story of misery to the whole world!"

The Pessimistic View

"I speak of marriage as I see it and know it to be all about me," the bachelor responded. "You women are given to chiding men for not marrying. Yet it is your own sex which keeps us from it, not our own selfishness, not the fascination of club life, nor the desire for freedom. It is the appalling number of discontented, unhappy and unfaithful wives we meet in society who swell the ranks of bachelorhood.

"What encouragement is there for a man to take unto himself a wife when he finds the friend for whom he acted as best man a few years ago an object of pity or ridicule among his fellows? It is because you women have so poor an ideal of what marriage should be, and what wifehood should mean, that the club ranks increase and domestic life becomes more and more rare in our land."

Married Flirts to Blame

I saw it was useless to discuss the matter, as the bachelor's experience was evidently of a nature to have warped his judgment. My own opinion of the world, based upon close observation and a somewhat wide experience, is that happy, virtuous homes far exceed in number the wretched ones in our land.

I believe that good, loyal wives and kind, appreciative husbands star our social firmament, where now and then and here and there falling stars of unfaithfulness and blazing comets of discontent are observable.

Let a stranger visit any interior village, and it is the recently divorced woman or the married flirt whom he hears described and discussed, not the happy wives and mothers, who form the foundation of the village society.

Nevertheless it is growing to be more and more the custom in America, as it is in Europe, for the married belle to pride herself upon her conquests, and to regard the old-fashioned custom of devotion in husband and wife as bad form.

She does not realize that many of the bachelors who flutter about her with words of flattery and admiration are in their secret hearts thanking God that they are not in the humiliating position of her husband. She does not know that she is disillusioning men with marriage by her utter lack of wifely dignity.

A Plea for Pity

Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Wife

He Learns That Limericks Have a Household Value

By Arthur Farland

"DID I tell you me an' the Party has it all fixed up to get tied?" asked the "L" guard.

"Poor old chap, no," said Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Wife. "Where did you stumble across the gold mine to invest in the fixing for a shed?"

"Oh, 'tain't gunter cost us nothin' for the plunge; that's what I wanter tell you about," retorted Billy. "Greatest skinch you ever heard. The Party stumbles over it in a magazine, an' when I ambles forth to her Ma's castle in the air—seven flights up in the rear—the Girlerine has a parlor sweet (whatever that is), a Morris chair an' all the fittin's for the dinin' room as good as got."

"How'd she work it?" asked Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Wife. "Sort of Raffles in petticoats game?"

"Naw, nothin' like that," returned the guard; "the password was limericks. It seems some furnichure shop out in Grand Rapids, where they makes the sticks, is offerin' prizes for them limerick things to kinder boost their goods, an' the prizes, kiddo, is all swell pieces of furnichure.

"An' Six Lines Is a Plenty."

"'As a limericker, William, I'm the soochatel,' says she to me. 'I've already got three gilt chairs an' a centre table cinched with the followin':

"'If you're plannin' to furnish a flat
With somethin' real nifty at that,
For the goods what's the goods,
An' the woods what are woods,
Why, come to the place where we're at.'

"'Well, Girlie,' says I, 'it's certainly got a great ring to it, a sort of waltz-me-around-again swing,' I says to the Skirt. 'That's all to the tabasco, kiddo,' an' I reaches for a slice of paper myself. 'But now jus' keep your eye on William while he dashes off one of them six-line jingles an' lands a four-leaf grub-holder, an' a four-leafer ought to be a lucky one to try for.' 'Oh, git one of them Missionary tables, William,' gushes the Party. 'Sure, little one,' says I, 'an' if we cinches it we won't be the first cannibals to dine off a Missionary,' an' with that I cooks up the followin' as a prize-winner:

"'Jus' swaller this toast with your foam—
Here's hopin' you'll soon own a home,
And when that day has came
That you'll fit up the same
At the shop which is writin' this pome.'

"An' there you are, sport," wound up the guard.

No Excuse With the License.

"Well, Billy, I congratulate you, for it looks to me as if your wedding might be indefinitely postponed.

"Besides which Minnehaha has her weather eye on those same prizes, and judging by the gems of poesy she's turning out I hardly see how anybody else can hope for a ghost of a chance. Not only has she strung together a whole batch of the jingles herself, but she's even put me on the job grinding 'em out. Here's the stumper I handed over to her yesterday:

"'Diogenes carried a lantern,
From which we are led to remark
'Tis plain to be seen
Old Di must have been
Afraid to go home in the dark.
Now, if that same lamp had been mission—
(The kind that we carry in stock),
Old Di would have had Enough for a cab
By putting his lantern in hock.'

"'Besides being slangy and horrid and utterly inadequate,' the maiden said to me in her frostiest tones, 'your verses stumble terribly.'

"Well, I don't know as it matters, Sport," said the guard, "seein' as how me an' the Party has them prizes cinched. An' all it's gunter to cost us to tie up will be a few bucks for the parson."

It sure is an aid to the marriag e game when you can hook out the house furnishings with limericks

THE CHIEF AND THE PROTEIDS

By James J. Montague

A German scientist has discovered that the human body is rich in proteids, proving that cannibals get high food values at their meals.—News Item.

A COLLEGE bred Zambesi chief one day ran short of potted beef
And caviar and camembert,
Which formed his daily diet;
And so he cast a hungry eye upon a subject sitting by
Who somehow felt, beneath his belt,
A thrill of keen disquiet.

"IN college," said the chief, "I learned that proteids, when nicely turned Upon a spit, exactly fit
A yearning human system;
And even fricassee, or stewed, among the highest forms of food
For human kind, you'll always find
That dieticians list 'em."

"FOR me, a crocodile flank steak, or puree of boiled garter snake,"
The subject said, a subtle dread
Within his breast awaking;
"I never ate a proteid—at least I hope I never did;
I think the stuff ain't good enough
To pay one for the baking.

"A PROTEID," the chief explained, "as scientists have oft maintained,
Is just the cheese for times like these
When one is short of victuals.
It's far superior to bread when one is pining to be fed;
Contains more cheer than even beer,
And has more strength than skittles.

"AND though the subject's delicate, I feel it's up to me to state
That when you're fried I'm satisfied
You'll prove an ideal diet,
Because all Africans are rich in protein food values, which
I've just discussed, and so, I trust,
You'll be resigned and quiet."

THE subject timidly arose, and said: "This lecture, I suppose,
Is quite correct, but I detect
A deep laid purpose in it.
The proteid I've got in me are all my private property,
And you can't dine on food that's mine—
Don't think it for a minute."

THE subject had but little brain, but made it up in might and main:
So late that night his appetite
He sat down to diminish
On grilled and garnished protein that once his royal chief had been
"Them science guys was surely wise,"
He mumbled at the finish.

"IT must be nice living in Washington."

"It is," said the ashman. "The only trouble is that everybody with a kick threatens to take it direct to the President. Keeps me skeered up more or less."

Girls' Tongues Estrange Their Best Friends

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THERE is just one drawback to a great friendship between two girls, and that is that they are in danger of talking too much.

By that I mean that they grow too confidential and tell things that are much better kept to themselves.

It's always well to remember that not one girl in ten can keep a secret.

Two girls talk about another girl, giving their opinions as so and so. One of them is very apt to talk to a third girl and give the opinion as facts, and the mischief is done.

I know one woman who would be horrified if any one accused her of telling untruths, and yet she can twist a story so far from its original shape as to be almost unrecognizable.

Don't Boast of Conquests

Girls simply can't help telling their love affairs to each other, but I warn you, girls, that least said, soonest mended, and the wisest girls tell the least.

Never be tempted to boast of your conquests; the girl who does the least boasting usually has the most attention.

When a girl writes telling me how good looking she is, and how all the men are crazy about her, I am fairly sure that she is drawing a long bow, that she has few good looks to boast of and that the men are able to exist without her.

Two men can be the best of friends and yet tell each other very little about their private affairs.

Why can't girls be like that, congenial and friendly without laying their souls bare at the first or second meeting.

Men Can Keep Secrets

When a girl becomes engaged it is a great mistake to tell the secret to anyone, unless she is willing that it should be generally known.

That is the sort of secret that is very hard to keep. It is such an interesting bit of news to announce, and if you tell one girl she will be quite certain to tell another, and so on, until your secret is public property.

Never tell a secret which concerns your employer. That is none of your business, and is dishonorable to the extreme.

There are a few rare people who can absolutely keep a secret, and I regret to say that most of them are men.

That, however, is not so much due to their high sense of honor as to their lack of interest in small details. And after all life would be dull if we kept all the secrets and never had the delightful experience of saying "now don't breathe this to a soul, but"——wouldn't it?

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TALK TO THE MOTHER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About three months ago I became acquainted with a young lady. I admired her from the first day and asked her if I could call at her place of business at nights and escort her home. She had no objection, so I did.

I felt she was just the kind of a girl I was long looking for, so I proposed to her and told her I would not be angry whether she consented or not. I begged her to be free about the matter, for I did not want the love of a woman without her own consent. At the same time I told her that she could take as long as she wished to give me the answer. Her mother became aware of the fact that there was someone taking her home from work every night. She was scolded because she did not tell her about it.

But this did not stop us from meeting, until one Sunday night, as I was about to leave her a few blocks away from her house, I told her that she could go home alone, for I did not want her mother to scold her again. She said that she did not care, her mother had to know me sooner or later. She expressed her willingness to keep company with me.

I met her the next morning, and asked her again if she really meant what she said the night before. She said she did, so I kept on meeting her as usual to see if she would change.

It became tiresome to keep company on the sly, so I told her that I wanted her folks to know about it too. She said not yet, but she did consult with her mother, and never told me. She said to me one night that she had something to tell me. She told me that her mother did not want her to keep company. She almost burst into tears, and begged forgiveness—that it was not her fault.

She told my friends that she was sorry to break off with me. I try not to meet her, for it pains me to see her.

I wish to know from you, should I make up with her? I know she is willing. I will not take any steps until I hear from you.

Was there any mistake of mine? Did I go about it right? I think I did the best I knew how.

A. A. B.

I DO not think you were to blame in any way; you were frank and honorable in your declaration. The girl evidently likes you, but is afraid to make any stand. Why not see her and take a firm stand with her. Tell her that you want to meet her mother and have a talk with her. Tell the mother that you want to marry her daughter, and ask what her objections are. I think that if you once talk with the mother things may be straightened out.

THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR

Novelized From the Drama of the Same Name by J. Hartley Manners

CHAPTER XVI.

Sir Isaac Relents.

IT was the first time in her life that Lady Margaret had taken so momentous a step as calling at the house next door without consulting Sir John. Just now, however, her timidity was lost in a wave of maternal love and pity. She knew what her two children had done to the Jacobsons in a spirit of renunciation and self-sacrifice and that all four would be miserably unhappy. She wanted to lighten the burden of sorrow for them if possible; at any rate to share it and to give them counsel.

Ulrica and Cecil were with Esther and Aldrian in the drawing room when she entered. Ulrica had told them of Sir John's pathetic plea and of her conviction that their only happiness for the present lay in abiding with him and comforting his old age. Cecil, although less convinced than Ulrica that they owed such a sacrifice to the unreasoning prejudice of their father, had agreed. Esther and Adrian listened to the picture Ulrica drew of Sir John in poverty, loneliness and age, and were touched.

"Ulrica is right, Cecil," Esther said. "I know if my father were like that and needed me I should never desert him no matter how unreasonable he might be. But we can wait."

"Of course we will wait," Adrian declared. "We're young, and we owe something to our parents, I suppose, although it is pretty hard to have to give up to their prejudices."

Cecil, in spite of his artistic temperament, always took the most practical view of things. He couldn't be depressed very long under any circumstances.

"Now, listen to me," he said. "We will wait, of course, but I don't think we will have to wait very long. My father is a bit unreasonable at times, and full of prejudices, but he is kind and affectionate with it all."

"But he will never consent, I'm sure," Ulrica said despondently.

"You wait," Cecil said reassuringly. "I'll wager that he will consent and that it will not be very long. He likes Esther now. He will like Adrian if he can be persuaded to know him. Then it will be only a step to his acknowledging the splendid qualities of Sir Isaac, and he will not only consent, but will apologize for his remarks here the other day."

Cecil and Ulrica were amazed when Lady Margaret entered. She included all four in a motherly, sympathetic greeting.

"I couldn't help following, dear," she said to Ulrica. "I don't want you to make yourselves unhappy, and I don't think it is necessary. I feel that your father will come around to his right senses after a while."

Sir Isaac was met at the door by the butler, who told him that Cecil and Ulrica had called together, and that Lady Margaret had followed.

Adrian sprang to his feet when his father entered, in some trepidation also.

"Father, you know Lady Margaret," he said.

Lady Margaret held out her hand frankly.

"I am glad to see you, Sir Isaac," she said. "I am afraid this seems like an invasion."

"It is one that gives me pleasure, Lady Margaret," Sir Isaac assured her gallantly.

"I came to see if I couldn't help in some way, Sir Isaac," Lady Margaret explained. "Our children are about to be very unhappy, I am afraid. And I am afraid also that the fault is not theirs nor yours. I do not know quite what your wishes are in the matter. I wish only their happiness."

"I am quite ready to place their happiness above any hopes or ideas I may have had respecting their future," Sir Isaac assured her.

"Such, I am sure, would be my husband's wish also," Lady Margaret told him. "Just now he is much disturbed, and I fear he does not quite realize what his attitude means to them. A little time may do much to soften him."

Sir Isaac was thoughtful for a few minutes as he stood regarding the little group.

"I fear that I, too, have been somewhat to blame," he said. "When Sir John was here the other day I spoke hastily and in temper. For that I should apologize. I wish my children to be happy. I will go to Sir John now and ask for his consent."

CHAPTER XVII.

Sir John's Apology.

SIR JOHN was still walking and muttering when Vining announced his next-door neighbor. Somewhat startled, he hesitated before asking the butler to show him in. Sir Isaac entered, and the two men bowed formally.

"Two days ago you pocketed your pride to call on me," said Sir Isaac. "I have pocketed mine in coming here—now."

"I am entirely at your service," Sir John said, after a moment's pause.

"Firstly, I wish to apologize."

"Apologize! You!"

"For my discourtesy two days ago," Sir Isaac continued.

Hastily, deprecatingly, Sir John exclaimed:

"The discourtesy was mine. I said certain things—I was hasty—I—something I've never done before. I desire to apologize to you. I do apologize."

It came hard, but he got it out.

"Your children are with mine," Sir Isaac said earnestly. "They are miserably unhappy. Mine are dear to me, Sir John. They love yours. I am prepared to withdraw what I said two days ago—to sink my own feelings. Shall we let them suffer for our unreasoning prejudices?"

"My children know my wishes," Sir John said stubbornly.

"And they are prepared to respect them," Sir Isaac assured him.

"Good," he grunted.

"You won't give your consent?"

"No. Let them wait until I'm gone."

Sir Isaac regarded the old Baronet almost pityingly for a moment.

"Do you hate me as much as that?" he asked.

The old man faced him, looking steadily into his eyes, and replied:

"I do."

"Very well," Sir Isaac said. "I understand your feelings. I appreciate and share them; but I would willingly have sacrificed mine to insure the happiness of my children. Sir John, good night."

Sir John stood looking straight before him as his visitor withdrew. The old man was thinking deeply and did not hear the door open and close.

"Naw, nothin' like that," returned the guard. "The password was limericks. It seems some furniture shop out in Grand Rapids, where they makes the stiffs, is offerin' prizes for them limerick things to [illegible] boost their goods, an' the prizes is [illegible] swell pieces of furniture.

"An' Six Lines Is a Plenty."

"'As a limericker, William, I'm the noochatel,' says she to me. 'I've already got three gilt chairs an' a centre table cinched with the following:

'If you're plannin' to furnish a flat
With somethin' real nifty at that,
For the goods what's the goods,
An' the woods what are woods,
Why, come to the place where we're at.'

"'Well, Girlie,' says I, 'it's certainly got a gait ring to it, a sort of waltz-me-around-again swing,' I says to the Skirt. 'That's me to the tabasco, kiddo,' an' I reaches for a slice of paper myself. 'But now jus' keep your eye on William while he dashes off one of them six-line jingles an' lands a four-leaf grub-holder, an' a four-leafer ought to be a lucky one to try for.' 'Oh, git one of them Missionary tables, William,' gushes the Party. 'Sure, little one,' says I, 'an' if we cinches it we won't be the first cannibals to dine off a Missionary,' an' with that I cooks up the followin' as a prize winner:

"'Jus' swaller this toast with your foam—
Here's hopin' you'll soon own a home,
And when that day has came
That you fit up the same
At the shop which is writin' this pome.'

"An' there you are, sport," wound up the guard.

No Excuse With the License.

"Well, Billy, I congratulate you, for it looks to me as if your wedding might be indefinitely postponed.

"Besides which Minnehaha has her weather eye on those same prizes, and judging by the gems of poesy she's turning out I hardly see how anybody else can hope for a ghost of a chance. Not only has she strung together a whole batch of the jingles herself, but she's even put me on the job grinding 'em out. Here's the stamper I handed over to her yesterday:

"Diogenes carried a lantern,
From which we are led to remark
His [illegible] to be [illegible]
Old Di[illegible] must have been
Afraid to go home in the dark.
Now, if that same [illegible] had of [illegible] mission
(The kind that we carry in stock)
Old D[illegible] would have had Enough for [illegible]
By putting his lantern in hock.

"Besides being slangy and bored and utterly inadequate," the maiden said to me in her frostiest tones, "your verses stand terribly."

"Well, I don't know as it matters, Sport," said the guard, "seein' as how me an' the Party has them prizes or not. An' all it's gunter to cost us to tie up [illegible] a few bucks for the parson."

It sure is an aid to the marriage game when you can hook out the house furnishings with limericks

THE CHIEF AND THE PROTEIDS

By James J. Montague

A German scientist has discovered that the human body is rich in proteids, proving that cannibals get high food values at their meals.—News Item.

A COLLEGE bred Zambesi chief one day ran short of potted beef
And caviar and camembert,
Which formed his daily diet.
And so he cast a hungry eye upon a subject sitting by
Who somehow felt, beneath his belt,
A thrill of keen disquiet.

"IN college," said the chief, "I learned that proteids, when nicely turned Upon a spit, exactly fit
A yearning human system,
And even fricassee, or stewed, among the highest forms of food
For human kind, you'll always find
That dieticians list 'em."

"FOR me, a crocodile flank steak, or puree of boiled garter snake,"
The subject said, a subtle dread
Within his breast awaking;
"I never ate a proteid—at least I hope I never did;
I think the stuff ain't good enough
To pay one for the baking."

"A PROTEID," the chief explained, "as scientists have oft maintained,
Is just the cheese for times like these
When one is short of victuals.
It's far superior to bread when one is pining to be fed,
Contains more cheer than even beer,
And has more strength than skittles.

"AND though the subject's delicate, I feel it's up to me to state
That when you're fried I'm satisfied
You'll prove an ideal diet,
Because all Africans are rich in protein food values, which
I've just discussed, and so, I trust,
You'll be resigned and quiet."

THE subject timidly arose, and said: "This lecture, I suppose,
Is quite correct, but I detect
A deep laid purpose in it.
The proteid I've got in me are all my private property,
And you can't dine on food that's mine—
Don't think it for a minute."

THE subject had but little brain, but made it up in might and main;
So late that night his appetite
He sat down to diminish
On grilled and garnished protein that once his royal chief had been.
"Them science guys was surely wise,"
He mumbled at the finish.

Smiles

"IT must be nice living in Washington."

"It is," said the ashman. "The only trouble is that everybody with a kick threatens to take it direct to the President. Keeps me skeered up more or less."

"I'm afraid I'm a bother to you," said she as he was helping her out.

"Not a bit," answered cabby, meaning to be gallant. "I likes a fare what steadies the cab."

Girls' Tongues Estrange Their Best Friends

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THERE is just one drawback to a great friendship between two girls and that is that they are in danger of talking too much.

By that I mean that they grow too confidential and tell things that are much better kept to themselves.

It's always well to remember that not one girl in ten can keep a secret.

Two girls talk about another girl, giving their opinions as so and so. One of them is very apt to talk to a third girl and give the opinion as facts, and the mischief is done.

I know one woman who would be horrified if any one accused her of telling untruths, and yet she can twist a story so far from its original shape as to be almost unrecognizable.

Don't Boast of Conquests

Girls simply can't help telling their love affairs to each other, but I warn you, girls, that least said, soonest mended, and the wisest girls tell the least.

Never be tempted to boast of your conquests; the girl who does the least boasting usually has the most attention.

When a girl writes telling me how good looking she is, and how all the men are crazy about her, I am fairly sure that she is drawing a long bow, that she has few good looks to boast of and that the men are able to exist without her.

Two men can be the best of friends and yet tell each other very little about their private affairs.

Men Can Keep Secrets

When a girl becomes engaged it is a great mistake to tell the secret to anyone, unless she is willing that it should be generally known.

That is the sort of secret that is very hard to keep. It is such an interesting bit of news to announce, and if you tell one girl she will be quite certain to tell another, and so on until your secret is public property.

Never tell a secret which concerns your employer. That is none of your business, and is dishonorable to the extreme.

There are a few rare people who can absolutely keep a secret, and I regret to say that most of them are men.

That, however, is not so much due to their high sense of honor as to their lack of interest in small details. And after all life would be dull if we kept all the secrets and never had the delightful experience of saying "now don't breathe this to a soul, but ——," wouldn't it?

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TALK TO THE MOTHER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About three months ago I became acquainted with a young lady. I admired her from the first day and asked her if I could call at her place of business at nights and escort her home. She had no objection, so I did.

I felt she was just the kind of a girl I was long looking for, so I proposed to her and told her I would not be angry whether she consented or not. I begged her to be free about the matter, for I did not want the love of a woman without her own consent. At the same time I told her that she could take as long as she wished to give me the answer. Her mother became aware of the fact that there was some one taking her home from work every night. She was scolded because she did not tell her about it.

But this did not stop us from meeting, until one Sunday night, as I was about to leave her a few blocks away from her house, I told her that she could go home alone, for I did not want her mother to scold her again. She said that she did not care, her mother had to know me sooner or later. She expressed her willingness to keep company with me.

I met her the next morning and asked her again if she really meant what she said the night before. She said she did, so I kept on meeting her as usual to see if she would change.

It became tiresome to keep company on the sly, so I told her that I wanted her folks to know about it too. She said not yet, but she did consult with her mother, and never told me. She said to me one night that she had something to tell me. She told me that her mother did not want her to keep company. She almost burst into tears, and begged forgiveness—that it was not her fault.

She told my friends that she was sorry to break off with me. I try not to meet her, for it pains me to see her.

I wish to know from you, should I make up with her? I know she is willing. I will not take any steps until I hear from you.

Was there any mistake of mine? Did I go about it right? I think I did the best I knew how.

A A B

I DO not think you were to blame in any way, you were frank and honorable in your declaration. The girl evidently likes you, but is afraid to make any stand. Why not see her and take a firm stand with her. Tell her that you want to meet her mother and have a talk with her. Tell the mother that you want to marry her daughter, and ask what her objections are. I think that if you once talk with the mother things may be straightened out.

THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR

Novelized From the Drama of the Same Name by J. Hartley Manners

CHAPTER XVI.

Sir Isaac Relents.

IT was the first time in her life that Lady Margaret had taken so momentous a step as calling at the house next door without consulting Sir John. Just now, however, her timidity was lost in a wave of maternal love and pity. She knew what her two children had done to the Jacobsons in a spirit of renunciation and self-sacrifice and that all four would be miserably unhappy. She wanted to lighten the burden of sorrow for them if possible, at any rate to share it and to give them counsel.

Ulrica and Cecil were with Esther and Adrian in the drawing room when she entered. Ulrica had told them of Sir John's pathetic plea and of her conviction that their only happiness for the present lay in abiding with him and comforting his old age. Cecil, although less convinced than Ulrica that they owed such a sacrifice to the unreasoning prejudice of their father, had agreed. Esther and Adrian listened to the picture Ulrica drew of Sir John in poverty, loneliness and age, and were touched.

"Ulrica is right, Cecil," Esther said. "I know if my father were like that and needed me I should never desert him no matter how unreasonable he might be. But we can wait."

"Of course we will wait," Adrian declared. "We're young, and we owe something to our parents, I suppose, although it is pretty hard to have to give up to their prejudices."

Cecil, in spite of his artistic temperament, always took the most practical view of things. He couldn't be depressed very long under any circumstances.

"Now, listen to me," he said. "We will wait, of course, but I don't think we will have to wait very long. My father is a bit unreasonable at times and full of prejudices, but he is kind and affectionate with it all."

"But he will never consent, I'm sure," Ulrica said despondently.

"You wait," Cecil said reassuringly. "I'll wager that he will consent and that it will not be very long. He likes Esther now. He will like Adrian if he can be persuaded to know him. Then it will be only a step to his acknowledging the splendid qualities of Sir Isaac, and he will not only consent, but will apologize for his remarks here the other day."

Cecil and Ulrica were amazed when Lady Margaret entered. She included all four in a motherly, sympathetic greeting.

"I couldn't help following, dear," she said to Ulrica. "I don't want you to make yourselves unhappy, and I don't think it is necessary. I feel that your father will come around to his right senses after a while."

Sir Isaac was met at the door by the butler, who told him that Cecil and Ulrica had called together, and that Lady Margaret had followed.

Adrian sprang to his feet when his father entered, in some trepidation also.

"Father, you know Lady Margaret," he said.

Lady Margaret held out her hand frankly. "I am glad to see you, Sir Isaac," she said. "I am afraid this seems like an invasion."

"It is one that gives me pleasure, Lady Margaret," Sir Isaac assured her gallantly.

"I came to see if I couldn't help in some way, Sir Isaac," Lady Margaret explained. "Our children are about to be very unhappy, I am afraid. And I am afraid also that the fault is not theirs nor yours. I do not know quite what your wishes are in the matter. I wish only their happiness."

"I am quite ready to place their happiness above any hopes or ideas I may have had respecting their future," Sir Isaac assured her.

"Such, I am sure, would be my husband's wish also," Lady Margaret told him. "Just now he is much disturbed and I fear he does not quite realize what his attitude means to them. A little time may do much to soften him."

Sir Isaac was thoughtful for a few minutes as he stood regarding the little group.

"I fear that I, too, have been somewhat to blame," he said. "When Sir John was here the other day I spoke hastily and in temper. For that I should apologize. I wish my children to be happy. I will go to Sir John now and ask for his consent."

CHAPTER XVII.

Sir John's Apology.

SIR JOHN was still walking and muttering when Vining announced his next door neighbor. Somewhat startled, he hesitated before asking the butler to show him in. Sir Isaac entered, and the two men bowed formally.

"Two days ago you pocketed your pride to call on me," said Sir Isaac. "I have pocketed mine in coming here—now."

"I am entirely at your service," Sir John said after a moment's pause.

"Firstly, I wish to apologize."

"Apologize! You!"

"For my discourtesy two days ago," Sir Isaac continued.

Hastily, deprecatingly, Sir John exclaimed:

"The discourtesy was mine. I said certain things—I was hasty—I—something I've never done before. I desire to apologize to you. I do apologize."

It came hard, but he got it out.

"Your children are with mine," Sir Isaac said earnestly. "They are miserably unhappy. Mine are dear to me, Sir John. They love yours. I am prepared to withdraw what I said two days ago—to sink my own feelings. Shall we let them suffer for our unreasoning prejudices?"

"My children know my wishes," Sir John said stubbornly.

"And they are prepared to respect them," Sir Isaac assured him.

"Good," he grunted.

"You won't give your consent?"

"No. Let them wait until I'm gone."

Sir Isaac regarded the old Baronet almost pityingly for a moment.

"Do you hate me as much as that?" he asked.

The old man faced him, looking steadily into his eyes, and replied:

"I do."

"Very well," Sir Isaac said. "I understand your feelings. I appreciate and share them; but I would willingly have sacrificed mine to insure the happiness of my children. Sir John, good night."

Sir John stood looking straight before him as his visitor withdrew. The old man was thinking deeply and did not hear the door open and close.

Society Applauds Thomas-Warren Romance

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

All roads patronized by our ultra fashionables lead to Pride's Crossing to-day for the wedding there of dainty, flower-like Helen Thomas and the stalwart young clubman, Samuel D. Warren, Jr.

Ever since their childhood the bride and groom have been friends, but it was not until the year of the winsome Helen's debut that an affection far stronger than friendship was discovered to exist and Mr. Warren took his place at the head of the line of the pretty bud's most ardent suitors.

They were both soon hopelessly in the toils of the little love God, but owing to their extreme youth the announcement of the engagement was postponed.

Sam donned overalls and went to work in his father's extensive paper mills, while Miss Helen entered half-heartedly into the remaining gayeties of her season and devoted her spare time to her music and art.

The ceremony takes place at "Netherfield" the Summer home of the bride's parents at Pride's Crossing and is followed by an al fresco reception. The Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham officiates.

Miss Margaret Thomas, the handsomest of last Winter's debutantes is her sister's maid of honor. She is of the handsome brunette Junoesque type of beauty and in her gown of filmy chiffon makes an attractive foil for her petite blonde sister, in her trailing robes of white satin and lace.

Bayard Warren is best man, while among the ushers are Gasper Bacon, George deK. Gilder, Charles Morgan and Charles Lanier Appleton of New York, Richard Lovering and Gordon Ware of Boston and Barthold Parker of Lancaster, all classmates, Harvard '08, with the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren will sail directly for Europe where they will spend the Summer, and upon their return will reside in Boston.

Miss Thomas is the older daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas of Gloucester street and a prominent member of the Vincent Club. At the club's show last month she made a most delightful picture in the group of Cafe girls.

Mr. Warren is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Warren of Dedham.

Mrs. J. Gardner Bradley, Mr. Warren's sister has come on from her home in Pittsburg to attend the wedding and is the guest of her parents at their Dedham estate. Miss Katherine Warren, another sister, has just returned from Europe.

Many invitations have reached our Boston fashionables, from Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer of Philadelphia, for the wedding reception of Miss Frances Fell and A. J. Antelo Devereux, which will take place at Camp Hill Hall, Fort Washington, Pa., at 4:30 o'clock, on Wednesday, June 23.

Miss Fell has any number of friends in our exclusive set here as she is a prime favorite in the exclusive little Summer colony at Islesboro, which is for the most part inhabited by Bostonians.

Last year she was one of the most interesting figures at the Country Club races in Brookline. Miss Fell is a favorite cousin of Miss Mary Astor Paul, whose wedding to Charles Munn is announced for Monday the 21st.

It is expected that both Miss Fell and Miss Paul will attend the Brookline races again this year as Mr. Devereux is to ride his own entries.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Paul (Isabel Biddle), who have been abroad since their marriage in Philadelphia last December, will return next week for the marriage of Miss Paul and Mr. Munn which will be solemnized at Woodcrest, the family home of the Pauls at Radnor, Pa.

Mrs. Charles H. Adams, Mrs. Frederick D. Allen, Miss Adaline Andrews, Mrs. Walter Calley, Mrs. Thomas C. Campbell, Mrs. Samuel B. Capen, Mrs. Eugene W. Clark, Mrs. George O. Currier, Mrs. Fayette S. Curtis, Mrs. Nelson Curtis, Mrs. Charles F. Dole, Mrs. Winthrop C. Durfee, Mrs. George W. Flynn, Mrs. Chauncey J. Hawkins, Mrs. George B. Kelly, Miss Emily H. Maxwell, Mrs. Robert M. Morse, Mrs. Charles H. Nevons, Mrs. William S. Packer, Mrs. Carroll Perry, Mrs. Robert H. Richards, Mrs. Sumner U. Shearman, Mrs. George W. Wheelwright, Jr., Mrs. Austin H. Whitcomb and Mrs. Harry C. Wilson are the patronesses for the lawn party and bazaar, this afternoon and evening, on the grounds of the Eliot School, Jamaica Plain, for the benefit of St. Mary's House for Sailors in East Boston.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames are to sail shortly for a six weeks' tour in Europe.

* * *

An attractive wedding took place yesterday in Emmanuel Church when Miss Ruth Conant became the wife of Clarence Mason Joyce, a graduate of the Institute of Technology. The maid of honor was Miss Gladys Holden and the best man was Mr. Leslie Thompson.

Edith Conant, sister of the bride, a girl in her teens, was flower girl, and dressed in pink she made a most charming member of the bridal party. The ushers were Alfred J. Myer, Jr., Richard Stesau, Daniel Edgerly, Edmund B. Conant, Herbert Tuttle, Oscar, Iasigi, C. J. Berry, and E. Nevelle Bennet. The two bridesmaids were Miss Helen Davis and Elsie Morrill.

The bride wore the wedding gown in which her mother was married, a rich white satin. She carried a dainty and attractive bouquet of lilies of the valley and wore orange blossoms in her dark hair.

The flower girl and bridesmaids were gowned in pink and gave just the desired touch of color to the whole scene. An old friend of both the bride and groom, Rev. William H. Dowty, former assistant minister at Emmanuel, performed the ceremony.

* * *

Lady Jane Lucinda Musgrave of East Grimstead, Sussex County, Eng., has purchased the Dr. Henry M. Field property, Windymore, in Stockbridge. Lady Musgrave, who is the widow of Sir Anthony Musgrave, late Governor of Queensland, Australia, is to spend the Fall months in this country.

* * *

The military attache of the French Embassy and Countess de Chambrun leave Washington to-day for their Summer home on the North Shore. They return to Washington late in August.

* * *

The Ambassador from Brazil and Mme. Nabuco, with their family and members of the embassy staff, also leave to-day for Manchester-by-the-Sea. Mme. Nabuco is one of the most attractive women in the diplomatic smart set, and should be very prominent in the social happenings of the North Shore this season.

* * *

Judge and Mrs. J. Willis Martin and the Misses Martin of Philadelphia, who are at Chestnut Hill, will leave for Europe, June 10, to remain abroad several months.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin P. Cheney have opened their Summer home at Middle Brewster Island.

THE WONDER GIRL GRADUATES WITH HONORS

THE MYSTERY OF THE YELLOW ROOM

SYNOPSIS

Copyright, 1908, by Brentano's.

ALL Paris was wildly excited over the great mystery of the tragedy of "The Yellow Room," in which an attempt was made to assassinate the beautiful and gifted Mlle. Stangerson.

The facts of the mystery were these:

At the Chateau du Glandier, on the border of the forest of Sainte-Genevieve, about Epinay-sur-Orge, lived Professor Stangerson and his daughter. She and her father were doing there the first scientific work in radiography—labors that served later to open the way for Monsieur and Madame Curie to the discovery of radium.

The laboratory of the Stangersons was in a pavilion about 1,000 feet from the chateau. Adjoining the laboratory was the "Yellow Room," where Mlle. Stangerson slept. The room was a very small one, and was furnished with a fairly large iron bedstead, a small table, a dressing table and two chairs. There was no access to the room except the door opening from the laboratory and one window.

In an attic directly over the "Yellow Room" lived an old servant in the Stangerson family called Daddy Jacques. Monsieur Stangerson slept in the chateau, so that the pavilion was occupied at night only by Mlle. Stangerson and Daddy Jacques.

On the night of the tragedy Mlle. Stangerson worked with her father till midnight and then retired to the Yellow Room. Her father and Daddy Jacques heard her lock the door of the Yellow Room and bolt it from the inside, and the old servant remarked that she must be afraid of "the bete du bon Dieu," which is the name given to a cat owned by an old woman known as Mother Angenoux, who lived nearby.

Shortly after making this remark Daddy Jacques heard the mewing of a cat. At 12:30 o'clock, while Jacques and Monsieur Sanderson were in the laboratory, there were sounds of a terrific struggle in the Yellow Room, and Mlle. Stangerson was heard crying, "Murder! Help!"

Immediately afterward revolver shots rang out, and the sounds of the struggle continued for some time; then all was silence.

Daddy Jacques and Mme. Bernier returned to the laboratory, and the three men finally succeeded in their effort to force the door of the Yellow Room. The room was dark, but a lamp held aloft by Mme. Bernier revealed a startling scene.

Mlle. Stangerson lay on the floor in her nightgown. There were marks on her throat, as if it had been clutched and almost torn with finger nails; and there was a deep wound on the right temple. A revolver that belonged to Daddy Jacques, and which he kept in his attic sleeping room, lay on the floor. Two shots had been fired from it, and it was assumed at the beginning that the bleeding wound in Mlle. Stangerson's temple was a bullet wound.

But there was no sign of the woman's assailant. In some manner he had escaped, although the one window in the room was still secured by closed and bolted shutters, fastened on the inside, and there was no chimney in the place.

The only possible clews discovered were blood-stained marks of a man's large hand on the walls and door; a big handkerchief, red with blood, without any initials; a workman's old cap and the footmarks of a man with large feet, whose bootsoles had left a sort of sooty impression.

The Epoque, a Paris newspaper, sent Joseph Rouletabille, a reporter, to ferret out the mystery. Rouletabille, through his marvellous detective ability, had gotten into newspaper work when he was sixteen years old.

Before departing he asked a friend named Sinclair to accompany him.

CHAPTER III. (Continued).

"With what weapon was it made?"

"That is a secret of the investigation."

"Have you found the weapon—whatever it was?"

The magistrate did not answer.

"And the wound in the throat?"

Almost Strangled to Death.

Here the examining magistrate readily confirmed the decision of the doctor that if the murderer had pressed her throat a few seconds longer Mlle. Stangerson would have died of strangulation.

"The affair as reported in the Matin," said Rouletabille eagerly, "seems to me more and more inexplicable. Can you tell me, monsieur, how many openings there are in the pavilion? I mean doors and windows."

"There are five," replied M. de Marquet, after having coughed once or twice, but no longer resisting the desire he felt to talk of the whole of the incredible mystery of the affair he was investigating. "There are five, of which the door of the vestibule is the only entrance to the pavilion—a door always automatically closed, which cannot be opened, either from the outside or inside, except with the two special keys which are never out of the possession of either Daddy Jacques or M. Stangerson.

"Mlle. Stangerson had no need for one, since Daddy Jacques lodged in the pavilion, and because during the daytime she never left her father. When they all four rushed into the Yellow Room, after breaking open the door of the laboratory, the door in the vestibule remained closed as usual, and of the two keys for opening it Daddy Jacques had one in his pocket and M. Stangerson the other.

"As to the windows of the pavilion, there are four; the one window of the Yellow Room and those of the laboratory looking out on to the country; the window in the vestibule looking into the park."

"It is by that window that he escaped from the pavilion!" cried Rouletabille.

"How do you know that?" demanded M. de Marquet, fixing a strange look on my young friend.

"We'll see later how he got away from the Yellow Room," replied Rouletabille, "but he must have left the pavilion by the vestibule window."

"Once more—how do you know that?

"How? Oh, the thing is simple enough! As soon as he found he could not escape by the door of the pavilion his only way out was by the window in the vestibule, unless he could pass through a grated window. The window of the Yellow Room is secured by iron bars, because it looks out upon the open country; the two windows of the laboratory have to be protected in like manner for the same reason.

Through Blinds, Like a Shadow.

"As the murderer got away, I conceive that he found a window that was not barred—that of the vestibule, which opens on to the park—that is to say, into the interior of the estate. There's not much magic in all that."

"Yes," said Monsieur de Marquet, "but what have you not guessed is that this single window in the vestibule, though it has no iron bars, has solid iron blinds. Now these iron blinds have remained fastened by their iron latch, and yet we have proof that the murderer made his escape from the pavilion by that window!

"Traces of blood on the inside wall and on the blinds, as well as on the floor, and footmarks, of which I have taken the measurements, attest the fact that the murderer made his escape that way. But, then, how did he do it, seeing that the blinds remained fastened on the inside? He passed through them like a shadow.

"But what is more bewildering than all is that it is impossible to form any idea as to how the murderer got out of the Yellow Room, or how he got across the laboratory to reach the vestibule! Ah, yes, monsieur Rouletabille, it is altogether as you said, a fine case, the key to which will not be discovered for a long time, I hope."

"You hope, Monsieur?"

Monsieur de Marquet corrected himself.

"I do not hope so—I think so."

"Could that window have been closed and refastened after the night of the assassin?" asked Rouletabille.

"That is what occurred to me for a moment; but it would imply an accomplice or accomplices—and I don't see——"

After a short silence he added:

"Ah—if Mademoiselle Stangerson were only well enough to-day to allow of her being questioned!"

The Skylight in the Attic.

Rouletabille, following up his thought, asked.

"And the attic?—There must be opening to that?"

"Yes, there is a window, or rather skylight, in it, which, as it looks out toward the country, Monsieur Stangerson has had barred, like the rest of the windows. These bars, as in the other windows, have remained intact, and the blinds, which naturally open inward, have not been unfastened. For the rest, we have not discovered anything to lead us to suspect that the murderer had passed through the attic."

"It seems clear to you, then, Monsieur, that the murderer escaped—nobody knows how—by the window in the vestibule"

"Everything goes to prove it."

"I think so, too," confessed Rouletabille gravely.

After a brief silence he continued:

"If you have not found any traces of the murderer in the attic, such as the dirty footmarks similar to those on the floor of the Yellow Room, you must come to the conclusion that it was not he who stole Daddy Jacques's revolver."

"There are no footmarks in the attic other than those of Daddy Jacques himself," said the magistrate with a significant turn of his head. Then, after an apparent decision, he added: "Daddy Jacques was with Monsieur Stangerson in the laboratory—and it was lucky for him he was."

"Then what part did his revolver play in the tragedy? It seems very clear that this weapon did less harm to Mademoiselle Stangerson than it did to the murderer."

The magistrate made no reply to this question, which doubtless embarrassed him. "Monsieur Stangerson," he said, "tells us that the two bullets have been found in the Yellow Room, one embedded in the wall stained with the impression of a red hand—a man's large hand—and the other in the ceiling."

A Bullet in the Ceiling!

"Oh! oh! in the ceiling!" muttered Rouletabille. "In the ceiling! That's very curious!—in the ceiling!"

He puffed awhile in silence at his pipe, enveloping himself in the smoke. When he reached Savigny-sur-Orge, I had to tap him on the shoulder to arouse him from his dream and come out on to the platform of the station.

There the Magistrate and his Registrar bowed to us, and by rapidly getting into a cab that was awaiting them, made us understand that they had seen enough of us.

"How long will it take to walk to the Chateau du Glandier?" Rouletabille asked one of the railway porters.

"An hour and a half or an hour and three-quarters—easy walking," the man replied.

Rouletabille looked up at the sky and, no doubt finding its appearance satisfactory, took my arm and said:

"Come on!—I need a walk."

"Are things getting less entangled?" I asked.

"Not a bit of it!" he said; "more entangled than ever! It's true I have an idea——"

"What's that?" I asked.

"I cant tell you what it is just at present—it's an idea involving the life or death of two persons at least."

"Do you think there were accomplices?"

"I don't think it——"

We fell into silence. Presently he went on:

"It was a bit of luck, our falling in with that examining magistrate and his registrar, eh? What did I tell you about that revolver?"

His head was bent down, he had his hands in his pockets, and he was whistling. After a while I heard him murmur:

"Poor woman!"

"Is it Mademoiselle Stangerson you are pitying?"

"Yes; she's a noble woman and worthy of being pitied!—a woman of a great, a very great character—I imagine—I imagine."

"You know her, then?"

"Not at all. I have never seen her but once."

A Woman of Great Courage.

"Why, then, do you say that she is a woman of great character?"

"Because she bravely faced the murderer; because she courageously defended herself—and, above all, because of the bullet in the ceiling."

I looked at Rouletabille and inwardly wondered whether he was not mocking me, or whether he had not suddenly gone out of his senses. But I saw that he had never been less inclined to laugh, and the brightness of his keenly intelligent eyes assured me that he retained all his reason.

When Air Traffic Is Regulated

By HANK

"It will be necessary [illegible] aerial traffic regulations soon."—Count Zeppelin, in an interview after his famous 900-mile trip.

IT is not exaggeration to make this prognostication—
That with traffic regulation in the air,
Very stringent laws on speeding we will mighty soon be needing
For the dashing, flashing aero-millionaire.

JUST consider what a horror it would be if we "termorrer"
'Woke to read that "Harold Hairbreadth in his 'plane
Ran into the Moon last night and put out old Luna's light.
'Tis reported it will never shine again."

IT will prove to be quiet graphic if the Boston rules of traffic
Are up there, like what they are down here to-day.
If we start to visit Venus, some air-cop will come between us
And yell out, "Go back and drive some other way."

WHEN the mile-a-second clipper passes 'round the "Little Dipper,"
He will hear an air-cop call, "Hey! Slow up there!"
You'll see signboards up on Mars: "Half speed here for aero cars,"
When they regulate the traffic in the air.

Mrs. Oelrichs Bars Mrs. Walsh at Newport

By WINIFRED BLACK

SO Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs of Newport has made up her mind to discourage the social climber, Mrs. Thomas Walsh of Colorado.

Dear me, what a world of surprises this is!

The man who wrote that old proverb "Fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind," didn't know much about it, did he?

Mrs. Oelrich was something of a climber herself, not so many years ago, they tell me.

And now they say she wants to kick down the ladder to keep the rest of the poor climbers down. I can't believe it. Tessie Fair Oelrichs had a good, sensible, plain, practical mother, who used to keep a boarding house at Angels' Camp, Cal., and a crude, wide-awake, intelligent father, who made his fortune in the mines and held on to it with Scotch thrift.

Mrs. Oelrichs is a good American, and I don't believe a word of it.

There's an old-fashioned mat that used to be the thing in the smart set of the country districts.

You could always tell the swells in any country town by finding the house with a cupola on top, an iron dog in the yard, two iron children holding an iron umbrella for a fountain and a mat on the front doorstep, with the word "Welcome" spelled on it in large red letters.

If American society knows what it is about it will keep the old-fashioned "Welcome" mat at the door and let in all the fresh blood and the new brains, and the good, wholesome common sense of the people who have had sense enough to make money and wisdom enough to hold on to it.

Throw out the "Welcome" mat, Mrs. Oelrichs; throw out the "Welcome" mat; and when any stranger with brains enough and ambition enough to make money enough to get into society steps on that mat, run out and welcome him and his wife and daughter with both of your pretty hands.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

In an Irish court recently an old man was called into the witness-box, and being infirm and just a little blind, he went too far in more than one sense. Instead of going up the stairs that led to the box, he mounted those that led to the bench. Said the judge, good-humoredly:

"Is it a judge you want to be, my good man?"

"Ah, sure, Your Honor," was the reply. "I'm an ould man now, and mebbe it's all I'm fit for."

The judge had no ready retort.

REFINING THE TORTURE

A convict in a German prison had been extremely refractory. One morning the warden said to the keeper: "I say, Huber, the scoundrel is acting worse than ever. Put him on bread and water."

"But he is already doing two fast days."

"Then give him a cookbook to read."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS: FINANCIAL NEWS

BIG GRIST OF TRANSFERS IN REAL ESTATE

Improvement in the briskness of realty sales still continues. A large grist of transfers was reported to-day, especially in the suburbs.

In the West End one of the largest sales of property in months has been recorded. The property is at Nos. 130 to 144 Cambridge street, corner of Nos. 1 to 14 Auburn court, and comprises two frame and three large brick structures on Cambridge street and fourteen brick houses on Auburn court, all occupying 17,000 square feet. The whole estate is assessed for $74,700, of which $48,000 is on the land.

The property has been purchased by Salman Sirk from Daniel J. Puffer et al. Mr. Sirk has bought for investment and it is his intention to make extensive improvements.

In the South End, the two and one-half story brick house and 858 square feet of land, all taxed on a valuation of $2,600, on Medford court, near Washington street, have been purchased by Isidor Burtman from Rosa Rodman. The land is valued at $1,100.

P. B. Corbett & Sons of the Kimball building have just sold the estate at No. 21 Mayfield street, Dorchester, comprising dwelling, garage and 11,783 square feet of land, the whole assessed for $10,600, of which $4,100 is on the land. It was sold for J. M. Laubenstein to M. J. and L. Thoemmel, who buys for occupancy. Terms of sale were private.

In the same suburb the frame house and 4,050 square feet of land at No. 29 Hawes avenue, near Geneva avenue, taxed for a total of $8,200, have been sold by Herman N. Neugroschl to Isaac Alberts. The land is rated for $1,200.

Hyman Bornstein has sold to Rose Sobatky, title passing through Joseph S. O'Brien, the frame house and 26,660 square feet of land at No. 7 Tebroc street, near Bowdoin street, Dorchester. This estate is taxed on a total valuation of $5,500, of which $500 is on the land.

John W. Collisan has purchased from Daniel C. Keough the frame house and 2,800 square feet of land, assessed for a total of $4,800, at No. 25 Howell street, between Boston street and Dorchester avenue. The land is valued at $800.

Lizzie M. MacKay has sold to Jennie Barker, title passing through William J. Paul, a brick house and 1,933 square feet of land on Colemand street, near Hamilton and Quincy streets, Dorchester. The property is taxed for $2,500.

The same buyer has also bought a brick house and 1,933 square feet of land on the same street, near the other property, from William B. Clark, Jr., trustee.

The American Surety Company of New York has sold to George H. Doucett et ux. a plot of 3,433 square feet of land, taxed for $500, on Houghton street, near Tileston place, Dorchester.

P. B. Corbett & Sons have sold for Lena Thoemmel the estate at No. 695 East Eighth street, South Boston, comprising a brick dwelling and 900 square feet of land, the whole assessed for $2,000. The purchaser has taken title for investment. Terms of sale were private.

In Brighton, the frame house and 3,848 square feet of land at Nos. 120-122 Brooks street, near Faneuil street, taxed for a total of $5,600, have been sold by Adelaide L. Murphy et al to Walter Kavanaugh. The land is rated for $600.

Isabel A. Morse has sold to Blanche Fitzpatrick the frame house and 4,000 square feet of land at No. 22 Alaska street, near Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury. The estate is assessed for a total of $6,000, of which $1,800 i on the land.

In the same suburb the property at No. 38 Intervale street, near Blue Hill avenue, consisting of a frame house and 4,410 square feet of land taxed for a total of $6,000, have been sold by Jennie K. Waters to Sarah A. Kennedy. The land is taxed for $1,500.

Elizabeth L. Moore et al. have sold to Kenie L. Flint the frame house and 2,820 square feet of land at No. 7 Fenner street, extending through to Codman place, Roxbury. The estate is assessed for $3,700, of which $700 is on the land.

In West Roxbury the frame house and 4,000 square feet of land at No. 4 Harris street, near Centre street, assessed for a total of $4,000, have been sold by William Horwitz to Sarah Coleman.

CALL ISSUED FOR MERCHANT MEETING

The call for the meeting which will signalize the actual consolidation of the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants Association, to be held June 15, was sent out to-day to all members of both organizations. The meeting will be held at 3:30 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce building, India and Milk streets. The list of twenty-three men nominated for the board of directors which will serve the members of the largest commercial organization in the country, is regarded as an exceptionally strong one. It includes members of the boards of directors of both old organizations and one or two additional names, as follows:

CLASS DAY UNDER TREES AT TUFTS

The class day exercises of Tufts College were held to-day beneath the elms on College Hill. It was the greatest fete of the year. The literary exercises were held in Goddard Chapel, where Howard E. Cousins, president of the senior class and manager of the varsity ball team, delivered the address of welcome. Lewis H. King delivered the chapel oration, and Miss Mary F. Bogue read the class poem. Miss Reba M. Bush wrote the words of the classic ode, and the music was composed by Lewis Deane. Dinner was served in the Goddard Gymnasium. Tree exercises were the afternoon feature. Carl P. Hubbard was chief marshal. Henry W. Roberts delivered the tree oration, and Robert F. Etz was the class historian. This evening the Glee Club will sing on the steps of Barnum Museum, and there will be a band concert and dancing in the gymnasium.

M'DONOUGH GIRL NOT SENT AWAY TO-DAY

Immigration Commissioner George P. Billings to-day declared that Miss Sarah McDonough, twenty years old, who came here from Ireland last week on the Allan line steamship Neumedian for treatment of her eyes to prevent blindness, and who has been held up pending deportment proceedings, would not sail on the Allan line steamship Laurencia, leaving Boston for Europe this afternoon. "Miss McDonough will stay here for a further examination of her case," said Colonel Billings to-day. "I received word to-day from Washington to hold the girl a while longer. I don't know where that rumor originated that the girl was to be deported."

SEE THE DOCTOR BEFORE MARRYING

SEATTLE, Wash., June 11.—The new State law providing that applicants for marriage licenses must undergo medical examination, except where the woman is forty-five years old, went into effect yesterday. Ten couples appeared at the license clerk's office with physicians certificates, and two couples, when informed of the new law, said they would go to British Columbia to marry. County officials say the law will result in many Americans marrying in Canada.

ASK $1,000 OF CITY FOR JULY 4 REGATTA

Medical Examiner Magrath, John J. Corrigan, superintendent of the East Boston postoffice, and James J. Phelan, the banker, called at the office of the Mayor to-day to urge an increase in the Fourth of July appropriation for the rowing regatta on the Charles River. The committee desired to have the amount raised from $750 to $1,000. The races will take place on the Charles River Basin, and the committee feels that a larger amount might be in order to celebrate the opening in connection with the races.

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, June 11.—In the stock market the technical condition of the list is materially strengthened from the point of view of those who are working for higher prices. But little liquidation of an important character makes its appearance. Professionals sell freely, but most of them borrow the stocks to sell. The Street is full of traders, who have sold out their long stocks and are waiting for a reaction to buy them in again. The peculiar situation is presented of bitter disappointment being expressed by bulls at the persistent strength of the market.

This Winter wheat crop, by the way, has become a factor in the stock market. Harvesting has been begun in the Southern territory, and even with the minimum crop of 400,000,000 bushels, the farmers of the Southwest will have in the next sixty days the equivalent of $450,000,000 cash to spend. It is perfectly safe to assume that a large proportion of this will go into the stock market, for the farmers have become so rich that their mortgages are paid off. They have phonographs, pianos, automobiles and machinery, and are now in position to buy bonds and stocks. A larger proportion than usual of the proceeds of crops will come to Wall Street this year, simply because the farmers have nothing else to do with it.

Strength of Union Pacific indicates continued success for E. H. Harriman in his foreign expedition. It developed yesterday that Mr. Harriman is accompanied by an owner of one of the most important Wall Street news agencies, and this is accepted as further evidence that he will have something to announce through this person, who is travelling in the capacity of a press agent in disguise.

Atchison has made a record, and the activity in the stock leads to the conversion of many thousand dollars' worth of the bonds. Atchison, from the stock market point of view, is just now in an exceedingly strong position. Not only has it been able to finance needed improvements on an exceedingly favorable basis, but it will get a heavy tonnage from the record corn crop in its history. It will also get big business from Winter wheat from now on.

$ $ $

The record price made in Northern Pacific was accompanied by reports that another melon would be cut. It takes Hill melons many months to ripen, as a rule, and professionals do not get excited over the rumor. There is no doubt that within a few months some extra disbursement will be made to Northern Pacific stockholders, but no official information can be obtained as to what shape it will take.

In connection with the increase in copper metal it may be well to consider the great possibilities of the immediate future in silver. Developments at the Cobalt camp are surprising even those who have been in touch with those mines. The camp is already producing ten per cent. of the world's output, and recent developments which have followed settlement of litigation over the Lawson property show that the bonanza veins have yet to be mined. On the Lawson one can walk 500 feet on a strip of ore a foot wide, assaying 14,000 ounces to the ton, at the surface. It takes only six cubic feet of this to make a ton. The property has only been three weeks in the hands of the La Rose, which is developing it. Kerr Lake, adjoining, is mining high grade ore at a depth of 400 feet. The money value of the Lawson vein staggers one, even though it should persist only 100 feet, which is a reasonable supposition, since a shaft now sinking is already down forty feet, with the value constant. The world must expect the silver issues to come to the front along with the coppers, and the natural result will be a big market in all mining stocks.

John A. Topping, chairman of the Republic Iron & Steel Company, said:

"Regarding the future, I am conservatively optimistic, and, while it is too early to make any definite forecast of crops, the general conditions at this time are promising for at least an average crop at better than average prices.

"Money rates continue easy and general enterprises should be stimulated. The principal factor of uncertainty is tariff legislation, and the eye of business is still on Washington, although the country as a whole seems rather disposed to discount conservative legislation. The general consuming trade for iron and steel has been purchasing and continues to purchase liberally, the railroads and railway equipment companies being the exception. But these last named consumers are now entering the market more liberally, and should they resume normal purchases the iron and steel works would soon be well filled with business.

"On the whole, the future has much of promise, and unless confidence should be disturbed by some unexpected happening there is every reason to believe that normal conditions of business will be resumed within a few months."

$ $ $

The Steel Trust anounced reopening of the Ensley rail mills of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company. Canadian steel companies reported their mills working at full capacity. The railroads are placing orders at a heavy rate. Attempts to depress Steel shares under such circumstances must end in failure. The activity in the stock is world-wide. Pending the beginning of actual transactions in the shares on the Paris Bourse a very large business has sprung up between New York and Paris. Traders in Paris telephone their orders to London and have them executed in New York, getting the report back in Paris nine minutes after giving the original order.

$ $ $

Judging from the improvement in business in the current quarter the Steel Corporation should experience no difficulty in showing net earnings of $100,000,000 or more in the current year. The directors would be justified in increasing the common dividend on a basis of $100,000,000 of earnings a year, but not while it is pursuing such an aggressive campaign for new construction. An "extra," therefore, might be an amiable compromise. The company is operating close to 80 per cent. of its blast furnace capacity, and if the tendency of steel prices continues upward, successive increases in monthly earnings may be expected for some time to come.

$ $ $

The anthracite trade, referring to Ontario, is not very flourishing at present, and the majority of Ontario's stock still is controlled by the New Haven. But the talk of the Canadian Pacific buying into the control, jointly with the New Haven, may have some foundation. Undoubtedly a pool is operating in the stock, and its formation may have for its basis something more substantial than mere speculation. The Canadian Pacific has shown by its acquisition of the Wisconsin Central that it wishes to delve into the United States territory over its own lines.

RIOTS AS MERCHANT PRINCE IS BURIED

PARIS, June 11.—Rioting, in which the coarse jests of workmen incited by socialistic newspapers were commingled with attempts of actual violence by more aggressive reactionaries, marked the magnificent funeral procession of H. A. Chanchard, proprietor of the Magasins du Louvre. At Pere-Lachaise Cemetery there was almost a riot when the cortege entered. The police, with drawn clubs, succeeded in driving the unruly throng away. More than 1,000,000 persons thronged the streets, thousands condemning the merchant prince for not leaving his great fortune to the poor.

LOCAL STOCK PRICES FIRM

STATE STREET, June 11.—There was little to arouse enthusiasm in the early stock market, yet prices were generally firm. Profit taking caused a fractional decline in Franklin to 17⅞. Copper was weak in London, although the domestic market is well maintained around 13¾ cents. Good leadership in the Boston market could accomplish much in the way of creating a bull market.

Amalgamated yielded fractionally to 85¾, but was very quiet. North Butte sold ex-dividend of $1 and ran off over a point to 59½. There was no particular pressure. Any buying orders would easily put up most any stock in the local copper list. Pool manipulation is entirely absent. American Telephone was firm and fairly active, stiffening to 142⅝. United States Steel was neglected and worked off slightly.

Curb trading was active in certain specialties. Davis Daly was the feature on the exchange with considerable activity. It had a ¾ extreme advance to above 6. First National was in good demand at 6 and better and Ohio was firm at above 5. La Rose was firm also. It is reported that a very large block of the latter stock has been taken privately for the account of a Canadian gentleman.

The New England National Bank, after its partial liquidations, will remove to Causeway street and take over the business of the branch now maintained by the Commonwealth Trust Company opposite the North station.

EIGHT CAUGHT IN AUTO TRAP FINED

Eight autoists paid fines of $15 each in the Dedham Court to-day for speeding, having been caught in Wellesley. They were: Waldon W. Jenckes of Milford, Richard B. Pierce of Brookline, George N. Brown of Jamaica Plain, Thomas A. Chapman of Boston, Frederick C. Jones, Jr., of Cambridge, Frank Jones of Whitman, Austin Eldridge of Boston and Theodore Chagman of Boston. John Barkas paid $10 for running a motorcycle without a license.

KING'S HORSE, BIG WINNER, IS DEAD

LONDON, June 11.—The royal stables suffered an irreparable loss to-day when the stallion, Florizel II., who won the second running of the Ascot gold vase, the Goodwood cup, the Manchester cup and many of the big classics in 1895, died at the royal stud. Florizel II. was the sire of many big stake winners.

EMPTY CARS CRASH; ENGINEER INJURED

Through somebody's blunder, two unloaded trains on the New York, New Haven & Hartford road crashed in the South Boston yards to-day. Casper Voght, engineer of one of the trains, was thrown from his cab. His bruises were treated at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

READING IS STOCK LEADER

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Irregularity characterized trading in the stock market to-day. At the opening the standard railroad shares showed strength, but in the next fifteen minutes of trading declines averaging ½ a point were recorded.

At this point Reading became very strong and advanced two points on heavy transactions. The balance of the list rallied a fraction and then sold off again at the low figures.

The steel shares continued under pressure of realizing sales, with the result that they showed fractional losses in the early trading. Amalgamated Copper was a trifle lower, while Smelters was a fraction higher. Southern Pacific advanced nearly one point, but lost most of its gain later as was the case with Atchison.

The probability of an assessment of $25 a share on Third avenue stock induced further liquidation of that issue. During the first half hour of trading it declined nearly 2 points to 25⅞. In London American shares were strong, with the Harriman issues and Eries in leadership.

On the New York Curb market Larose was the feature, with a new high record at 7⅝. Other dividend paying silver shares were also in demand, but with no material change in prices. The porphyry coppers were fairly active.

FINANCE ROAD TO RIVAL MELLEN ROAD

LONDON, June 11.—F. F. Searing of New York, president of the Delaware & Eastern Railway Company, which is building a new line from the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania to Schenectady, where it could make a connection with the Boston & Maine system, has been in Europe for several weeks in connection with floating bonds for the enterprise to the amount of $4,000,000. Mr. Searing has just returned to London from Amsterdam. At the Savoy he said he had met with good success in negotiating the loan.

The new line is to be a direct rival of the Delaware & Hudson, and is also likely to affect largely the New Haven Railroad's coal traffic, despite the control of the Boston & Maine by New Haven interests.

SEWING MACHINE TRUST HITS SNAG

NEW YORK, June 11.—A conference of New York and Buffalo capitalists was held at the Hotel Belmont, and plans were perfected for a combination of independent sewing machine companies to fight the Singer Company monopoly. Operations were begun at once with several million dollars of working capital pledged. The King Sewing Machine Company of Buffalo will be used as the nucleus of the concern. Identity of the New York backers of the new company is not disclosed, but it is known that A. D. Sikes of Philadelphia, George S. Montgomery and Morris S. Tremaine of Buffalo, Carlton M. Smith of North Tonawanda and Horace T. Taylor are interested.

TAFT FIGHTS SUGAR TRUST

WASHINGTON, June 11.—President Taft is determined that light shall be let in upon the workings of the Sugar Trust, and it is a result of his orders that the Federal Grand Jury in New York has begun an investigation of the settlement by the trust with the Pennsylvania Company by paying millions in cash and securities.

To bring about action the President called Attorney-General Wickersham into consultation over the Sugar Trust affairs. The Department of Justice, spurred by the President, has been examining the evidence developed in the Pennsylvania Company's suit against the trust, and there is good ground for the statement that it has advised the President that criminal action against the big Havemeyer concern under the Sherman anti-trust law was feasible.

The presentation of the case to the Federal Jury in New York yesterday was the first development in the result. The action of the Sugar Trust in compromising the Pennsylvania suit at a cost of millions and the trust's confession of guilt in the weighing frauds exposure have convinced the President that it can be punished, and that the time to do it is now, with a fight on the sugar schedule in the tariff bill practically assured when the bill comes into the Senate from the committee of the whole.

U. S. STEEL FOR THE PARIS CURB

PARIS, June 11.—The impression gathered from a high authority is that the men here who are backing the plan to list United States Steel on the Bourse feel that they must be satisfied if permission is gained for Steel to be dealt in by the Coulisse, roughly corresponding to the New York Curb.

Surfacing and Grading Boston Embankment.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Charles River Basin Commission.

SEALED proposals will be received at the office of the Charles River Basin Commission, 367 Boylston street, Boston, Mass., until 2:30 o'clock p. m., of Monday, June 21, 1909, for surfacing and grading Sections 2, 3 and 4 of the Boston Embankment, which sections extend along the Boston side of the Charles River from Berkeley street to Charlesgate West. The work will require about 11,000 feet of trench in which to lay pipes which will be furnished by the Commission; 41 catch-basins; 600 cubic yards of gravel; 330 square yards of vitrified brick gutters, 9,600 square yards of granolithic walk; and 21,000 cubic yards of loam. The gravel and loam will be measured in place. The work to be done includes the laying of pipes for water supply, drains and electric wires; the construction of service boxes and catch-basins; laying brick gutters; building gravel and granolithic walks; and placing loam upon the embankment and seeding or sodding it for grass. Pamphlets containing further information for bidders, forms of proposal, contract and specifications will be ready about June 11 and will be mailed to contractors who apply to the Chief Engineer, or may be obtained at his office, 367 Boylston street, Boston, where also plans may be seen. The printed form must be used in making proposals. The Commission reserves the right to reject any or all proposals and to accept the proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth. HENRY D. YERXA, Chairman; JOSHUA B. HOLDEN, EDGAR R. CHAMPLIN, Charles River Basin Commission; HIRAM A. MILLER, Chief Engineer; WILLIAM S. YOUNGMAN, Secretary.

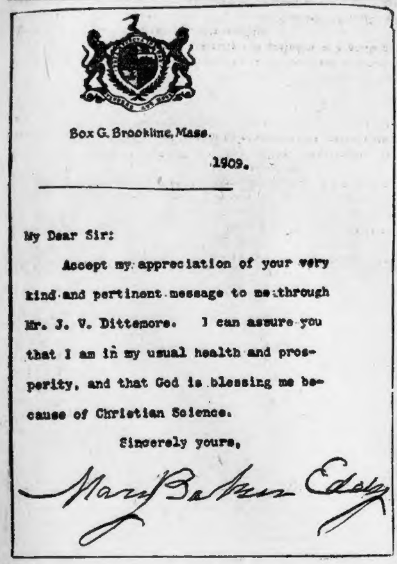
A Truly Wonderful Woman Is Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy

Well May Her Students and Friends Be Proud of Her

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner



Box G, Brookline, Mass.

1909.

My Dear Sir:

Accept my appreciation of your very kind and pertinent message to me through Mr. J. V. Dittemore. I can assure you that I am in my usual health and prosperity, and that God is blessing me because of Christian Science.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Baker Eddy

Recently, in the old-fashioned and tiresome way, there were published foolish and untruthful statements concerning Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, leader of the Christian Scientists throughout the world.

An effort was made to represent Mrs. Eddy as ill, incapable of taking care of herself, or even dead.

It is surprising and rather shameful that any newspaper could be persuaded thus to encourage the hounding of a woman who has brought happiness into the lives of hundreds of thousands of human beings, who has certainly harmed nobody, and who has the devoted affection of an enormous following.

Mrs. Eddy is to-day past eighty-eight years of age; she works with those that assist her in her very great undertakings; she controls and directs all of them. She is entitled to, and she has the respect and admiration of millions of human beings who, like this writer, do not share the belief in Christian Science, yet render the tribute of profound respect to the leader of that belief.

Feeling that some friends of Mrs. Eddy may have been disturbed by the false and malicious stories recently published concerning her, we here publish, with very great pleasure, a letter just received from Mrs. Eddy, written day before yesterday in response to a friendly greeting sent by one of her friends on the editorial staff of this newspaper.

Mrs. Eddy's letter is signed in her own handwriting, with which this writer is familiar. Christian Scientists may rest assured that they have in their leader an actual, living person, energetic, determined and marvellous in her apparent defiance of great age.

The letter published at the top of this column is a photographic facsimile of Mrs. Eddy's letter.

Booker Washington and Jack Johnson

The Teacher of Tuskegee Obtains Popularity at the Expense of Some Repute

The president of the Tuskegee negro school has usually kept a pretty level head in the counsels of his race.

His utterances have usually been discreet and diplomatic, and he has been in the main a conservator of peace, rather than an inspiration to racial asperities.

But Booker Washington falls several degrees below his own level as an educator and a leader when he stirs colored men to wild enthusiasm in a negro church with the statement that "Jack Johnson's pugilistic victory was a godsend to the negro race."

The ideal set forth in this statement is not one which does credit to a great educator supposed to be leading an undeveloped and unfortunate race through a period of great difficulty and prejudice to a position of good will and good citizenship in this republic.

What a chorus of derision would greet the president of Harvard if he should hail a victory of Jim Jeffries over Johnson as the high expression of Caucasian courage, worthy of emulation and a "godsend to the white race!"

If Booker Washington was seeking the applause of the radical element of his race, which has heretofore been doled out to him rather scantily, he took the right road to reach it—unworthy as it was.

If he was merely voicing a racial joy over a negro's success in an unworthy field of endeavor, he might have restrained it for a more appropriate place and a more seasonable time and audience.

And for the race's teacher now to fall in line with the shouting and unthinking multitude behind this black prizefighter of doubtful morals and uncertain character will go far toward fixing the ideals of a race along lines that will be infinitely more hurtful than helpful in the future.

Johnson's victory has been rather a curse than a blessing to a race which needs to climb its patient, weary way along wiser ways to development. The negro race has better models of character and worthier examples of courage than Jack Johnson.

And the Teacher of Tuskegee has purchased a whirlwind of temporary applause at the price of much of his own repute.

Success After Failure

Captain John Smith

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

When the average person is talking of Captain John Smith, has spoken of the Pocahontas episode, you need not look for much information upon the subject, for that is about all that the general run of people know about it.

They do not know that the man whose life was saved by the beautiful Indian maiden had already experienced one of the most romantic lives conceivable; had faced death, and miraculously escaped from it, scores of times; had, in a word, about boxed the whole compass of human fortune and seen about all that life had to show of joy and of sorrow, of pleasure and of pain.

Born on a farm in Lincolnshire, England, in 1580, Smith was from his earliest years the victim of an uncontrollable wanderlust. At the age of fifteen he sold the few effects that had been left to him by his father and made ready for sea, but, being apprehended by an uncle as he was about to sail, he was put out as apprentice to a merchant.

But the wander-lust was too strong for the merchant's vigilance, and young Smith was soon off and away after adventures.

Following the white plume of Navarre for a season, Smith next found himself fighting Spaniards in the Netherlands—a job that he mightily enjoyed, for in his soul he mortally hated everything that smacked of the Inquisition.

Having killed what Spaniards he could in Holland, Smith set out afoot through France, fetching up at Marseilles. From that port he took passage on a vessel bound for Rome. On the way a great storm arose, and the pilgrims to the Holy City, knowing that Smith was a "heretic," adjudged him to be the Jonah in the case and hove him into the sea.

Being a good swimmer, Smith managed to reach an uninhabited island, from which he was rescued by a passing craft and taken to Egypt.

It was one of the most natural things in the world that Smith should become one the company for the settlement of Virginia, and fortunate was it for Virginia that such was the case.

"But for this man's superb courage and resourcefulness," declares Fiske, "one can hardly believe that the colony would have lasted till 1600. It would have succumbed like Lane's colony, and White's, and Popham's; one more would have been added to the sickening list of failures, and the hopes built upon Virginia in England would have been sadly dashed.

"The utmost ingenuity on the part of Smith's detractors can never do away with the fact that his personal qualities did more than anything else to prevent such a direful calamity, and for this reason he will always remain a great and commanding figure in American history."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By William F. Kirk

Pa calm hoam last nite with a statue. It was a vary butiful picter of a angel sleeping on a cloud.

Wat in the world is that, sed Ma, & from wat Peddler did you buy it?

From wat peddler? sed Pa. Why, woman, I made that statue myself, after I had got through with my work. I have never toald you beefoar, sed Pa, beckaus I have a grate talent for beeing a sculptor & wanted to surprise you, so I made this statue & I have brought it hoam to you for a slite toaken of my esteem.

It is a vary butiful picter, sed Ma, this statue of yures, but I think a grate deel of its pop-u-larity will deepend on the naim. We ought to give it a good naim, sumthing like Dawn's Awakening, or Within the Perly Gates. Tell me, deer, sed Ma, how you calm to go into the sculping business. It is such a sweet statue & I want to know, sed Ma.

Well, sed Pa, it was this way. I met a butiful model one (1) noon at a informal luncheon. I shall nevver forget her fair, girlish face, crowned by its welth of auburn hair, sed Pa.

Sumthing in the glint of her hair, sed Pa, reeminded me of a Swiss sunset. Sumthing in her violet eyes, Pa sed, reeminded me of a violet. Sumthing about her form, a vague, inde-finable sumthing, reeminded me of a white birch sapling swayed in a October breeze. It did? sed Ma. Yes, indeed, sed Pa.

Proceed with yure story, sed Ma. I am all ears.

Well, sed Pa, it was wen I first looked at this fair yung model that the inspirashun calm to me with stunning force, the inspirashun to do sum light sculping by way of recreashun. I went & hired a studio, sed Pa, & the fair yung model calm every day & posed for this butiful angel wich I have jest presented you with, Pa sed.

It was a long ordeel for her, sed Pa, but she nevver wavered & she nevver missed a day at the studio until the statue was all did, sed Pa. She nevver missed a day, didn't she? Sed Ma.

Not one, sed Pa. They were happy days, too, Pa sed. I was so engrossed in my work that the moments sped by like that many Rosebeus. The sound of her sweet, tired voice was like musick in my ears, sed Pa.

Then Ma took the statue & threw it on the floor & it broak. It was only plaster of paris.

Then Pa beegan to laff & toald Ma that he bought the statue from a Italian wich needed the munny to buy a bomb. Then Ma laffed too, & ther wasent any moar trubbel. You know, dear, sed Pa, that I wuddent be a sculpter & have a model. You bet I know it, sed Ma.
